Work to begin Oct. 15

2 construction contracts OKd for memorial pavilion

by JOHN MAES

The Military Commerorative Committee of Des Plaines has accepted bids for some $19,000 in construction on its memorial bandshell. Work on the project is expected to begin Oct. 15.

The committee which has raised nearly $30,000 toward the pavilion at Lake Opeka Park approved two contracts for the job at a meeting Wednesday.

The group also decided on Oct. 12 as a date for groundbreaking ceremonies.

Interstate Steel Fabricators of Des Plaines was awarded an $8,500 contract while an $11,500 pact was given to Rand Construction Co., a Wheeling firm.

Orville Kurtz, a Des Plaines architect and member of the committee, told the group at Wednesday's meeting the facility could be completed this year, "except for some minor items."

Committee members say the $60,000 bandshell-pavilion will be used for concerts, community theater groups and for the activities of other local civic organizations.

THE MEMORIAL group has been able to raise about half the necessary funds for the project, dedicated to men and women who have served in the military, through a series of weekly bingo games held at the Casa Royale in Des Plaines.

Members are hopeful the games will bring in an additional $6,000 by December to help finance the project.

City officials announced last month they would contribute up to $12,000 in city revenue sharing funds for electrical work on the pavilion but that money will probably not be available until next year, according to Alvin Schalla, president of the committee.

Park District Director Robert Kunkel, who also attended the meeting, was requested by the group to ask his board of commissioners if any park district funds could be made available for the project.

The commissioners will consider the request at their Tuesday meeting.

City plans blood draw to ease shortage

The City of Des Plaines will hold a blood drive Thursday to help ease an acute blood shortage being experienced in the entire Chicago Metropolitan area during the last half of August.

The Northwest suburbs, including Des Plaines, are in the same short supply, according to Health Director Jane Branding.

Des Plaines has cooperated with the North Suburban Blood Center under its 4 per cent plan which assures all local residents of blood replacement without charge. The Northwest suburbs use 600 pints or more of blood each week supplied by the center. Local hospitals also are supplied by the center.

Des Plaines has had a poor record in meeting its yearly quota, according to Mrs. Branding. The Des Plaines blood center has scheduled the special drawing to help alleviate this shortage and special emphasis will be placed on recruiting donors from Des Plaines industrial complexes.

RESIDENTS ARE urged to donate Aug. 22. Any donor guarantees unlimited blood for himself and his family for one year. One pint goes toward the city's quota.

The city is 490 pints short of its current quarterly quota at this time. With a quarterly quota of 590 pints, only 100 pints have been donated, and the remainder are needed during August and September to meet the quota and continue the replacement program in the city.

The special drawing Aug. 22 will be held from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. at the city garage, 1111 Campground Rd. Appointments can be made by calling 296-5253 or 824-3136, ext. 21 or 51.

Persons 18 to 65 in good health are eligible to donate. Mrs. Branding reminds donors no fatty foods should be eaten four hours before the donation.

Maine West Key Club to sponsor car wash

Maine West Key Club is sponsoring a car wash Saturday, Aug. 24 from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Cars will be washed at the school D-wing parking lot at the rear of the building next to the bus concourse.

A donation of $1 will go to Maine West Key Club in order to sustain its services to the school and community.

Ed Rhinehart owner of the Dog 'N Suds Drive-In at Wolf and Algonquin Roads has donated root beer to be distributed free, two to each family having their car washed.

John Hugh is faculty sponsor of the Key Club and Lynne Kloster is the Kiwanis adviser to the club.

ROLL UP THE TENT and out the barrel for the Jaycees annual Oktoberfest is getting under way tonight. Beer, brats, corn and pretzels will be served from 5 p.m. to midnight today, 1 p.m. to midnight Saturday and 1 to 8 p.m. Sunday at the corner of Lee and Oakton streets. Jaycees John McAndrews and Gary Cooper get the tent ready for the crowds.

Attorney asks delay for two projects

by JOHN MAES

Maine Township officials have been asked to withhold financing for at least two projects funded with federal revenue sharing money until a matter concerning use of the government funds is decided in the courts.

The Board of Auditors was asked at a meeting Tuesday by Township Atty. Milton Tuttle to withhold revenue sharings funds for the newly formed committee on youth and the council on alcoholism.

The court case, which involves Palatine Township, stemmed from a series of complaints by the Illinois League of Women Voters that the funds allocated to three township mental health agencies was misused. The LVW claimed the expenditure violated federal laws governing use of the funds.

Richard Cowen, an attorney for Palatine Township, recently filed a motion in federal court asking for an interpretation of the law.

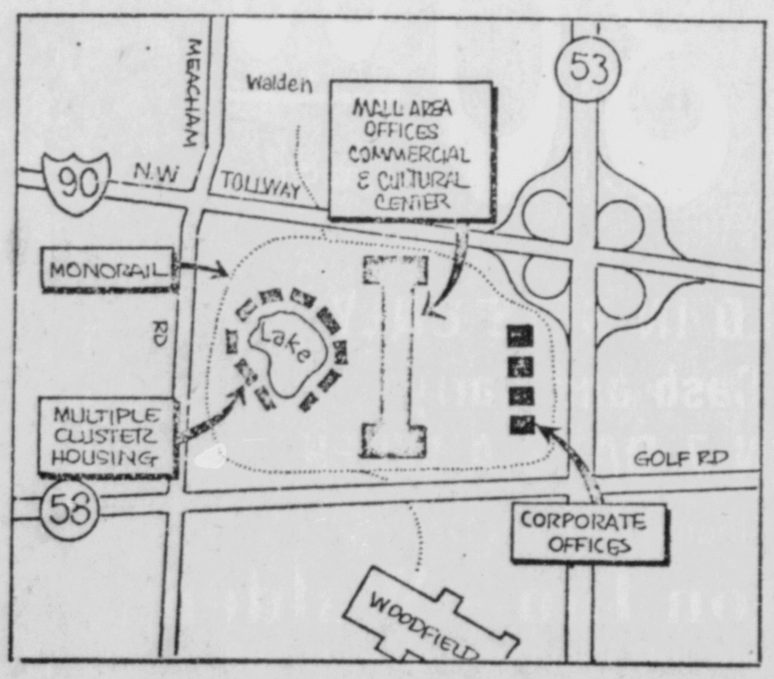

TUTTLE ASKED Maine Township officials Tuesday to hold off spending revenue sharing money on the two programs Massive shop center—a rival for Loop?

A 237-ACRE Union 76 Oil Co. Schaumburg site could be the eventual metro center that would provide 3,500 apartments plus commercial and recreational areas north of Woodfield Shopping Center.

After the hoopla is over, the question remains, will Woodfield 76 be something — as its developers contend — rivaling Chicago's Loop?

The answer is probably not, but don't believe that it won't be awfully big, anyway. The proposed "metro center" planned for Schaumburg will have a revolutionary impact on the Northwest suburbs and for sheer size will rival the size of a small city.

As proposed, Woodfield 76 will be:

- A 237-acre commercial-residential-recreational development.
- A new use for the prime property now occupied by Union Oil just north of Golf Road and west of Ill. Rte. 53, across the road from Woodfield shopping center.
- A plan so massive that the first 104 acres to be developed will not be completed for the next 20 years.

If the Village of Schaumburg agrees to annex the land, now in unincorporated Cook County, and give it proper zoning, the center eventually could provide homes for 8,500 persons and jobs for another 10,000 workers, developers contend.

The project is the brainchild of Marshall Bennett, of Bennett and Kahnweiler, a Chicago real estate firm. He is a principal in the "metro center" development team that includes Union Oil Co. of California and the Pritzker family, owners of the Hyatt hotel chain.

DURING THE PAST four years, Bennett's team has spent $500,000 to design the project under a concept integrating commercial, residential and recreational development around a 10-acre lake.

Initial development would begin at the east side of the site, near I-90, with office and recreational facilities. The entire development would contain 2.1 million square feet of office space, some in high rise buildings and other in smaller corporate structures, custom designed for purchasers.

Recreational space throughout the site will total 120,000 square feet and consist of tennis courts, health clubs

Bensinger 'listens' to suburbanites

More sheriff patrols needed: panel

by AL MESSERSCHMIDT

More sheriff's patrols in unincorporated areas, increased drug enforcement and education and construction of local court facilities were proposed during a "listening" session sponsored by Peter Bensinger at Harper College Wednesday.

Bensinger is Republican Party candidate for Cook County sheriff.

Bensinger and five panel members listened to four local officials — Hoffman Estates Village Pres. Virginia Hayter; State Rep. Richard Mugalian, D-Palatine; Joanne Reid, of the Schaumburg Township Commission on Youth, and Paul Richartz, of the Prospect Heights Improvement Assn. — discuss needs for increased sheriff's activity in the suburbs.

A final Northwest suburban session will be Aug. 27 in Des Plaines.

Only eight persons, other than panel members, reporters and witnesses, attended the session Wednesday.

PETER BENSINGER, GOP candidate for Cook County Sheriff, listens to proposals for changing of county law enforcement during a session in Palatine Wednesday. Local officials called for increases in patrols of unincorporated areas, drug programs and opening of suburban courts.

"THE CONCERN OF unincorporated areas is of great necessity," said Richartz, who also represented Jack Gilligan, head of the Congress of Cook County Homeowners Assn. "We depend almost 100 per cent on the sheriff's police. Our major complaint has to do with their numbers."

Richartz said that unincorporated residents may wait 90 minutes for a patrol car and that the sheriff's juvenile program is "appallingly understaffed. The forest preserves are unsafe and gangs are taking over."

"Personal safety is the primary concern of the genral population," Mrs. Hayter said. "Continued leniency is a disheartening and frustrating fact" in the court system. Anonymity shields juveniles and "most of them arrive back home with little or no penance in their demeanor."

MRS. HAYTER CALLED for increased drug education programs and said "more and more break-ins" are tied to teen-age drug use.

"We need more attention to problem solving," Mugalian said. "The amount of money spent for prevention is minimal compared to the total spent" to run the corrections system.

Mugalian said that one citizen complaint is lack of divorce, family and juvenile courts in the Cook County "panhandle" that includes the Northwest suburbs.

"It's easier to go downtown (to Chicago) than to drive to Niles" (where juvenile court cases are now scheduled), Mrs. Reid said.

The panel includes Jean Fisler of "The Bridge" in Palatine; James Bronner, a Chicago attorney; Nowal Morris, a University of Chicago criminologist; Ralph Morris of Palatine, a professor at the University of Illinois Medical Center, and Dr. Joseph Skom, head of the American Medical Assn.

Suggestions from the session series, which is planned throughout the county, will be used to determine campaign priorities, Bensinger said.

Hanover Park's ex-mayor indicted

Former Hanover Park Mayor Richard H. Baker was indicted Thursday on charges of extortion and filing false income tax returns between 1969 and 1973. He was also liquor commissioner for the village and is accused of accepting nearly $22,500 from liquor license applicants and developers. Baker was indicted by a federal grand jury and has been released on bond until his hearing before U.S. District Court Judge Bernard Decker.

Gill seeks state job

Supt. Kenneth Gill of School Dist. 21 has applied for the job of state school superintendent. "I couldn't say at this stage that I'd take the job even if it were offered to me," said Gill. "I'd have to know more about how the new office will operate." The state superintendent, a newly formed position, will be hired by the Illinois Board of Education, which takes over duties of the present superintendent of public instruction Jan. 1, 1975.

Youth, 15, electrocuted

A Palatine youth was electrocuted in a freak backyard accident Thursday in his former hometown of Jackson, Miss. Jackson police said Ronald Walsh Jr., 15, of 461 Everett Dr., was crossing a backyard when he was caught in an electrical wire used to keep animals out of a garden. The homeowner has been charged with murder, police said.

Mini-baby boom

This fall will be a wet season for the parents of a record 288 babies born in the month of July at Northwest Community Hospital. The record, which includes one set of twins, tops a March, 1973, record of 264. Hospital officials could give no reason for the mini baby boom.

Mobile consumer fraud unit at Woodfield Aug. 26-30

Are you the victim of a deceptive business practice?

If you have been victimized in a business transaction either by theft, forgery, door-to-door salesmen, bad checks or other deceptive practices, the Cook County State's Attorney's Office wants to know about it.

A mobile unit of the state's attorney's Fraud and Consumer Complaint Division will be at Woodfield Shopping Center Aug. 26-30 to take complaints from Northwest suburban residents.

The mobile office is staffed by an assistant state's attorney. No appointment is necessary and there is no charge for the service.

Persons coming to the unit with a complaint are asked to bring the necessary receipts, checks, money orders, contracts or other documents pertaining to their case.

The mobile office will be parked at Lord and Taylor Aug. 26-30 from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Jaffe proposes to extend tenure to non-teachers

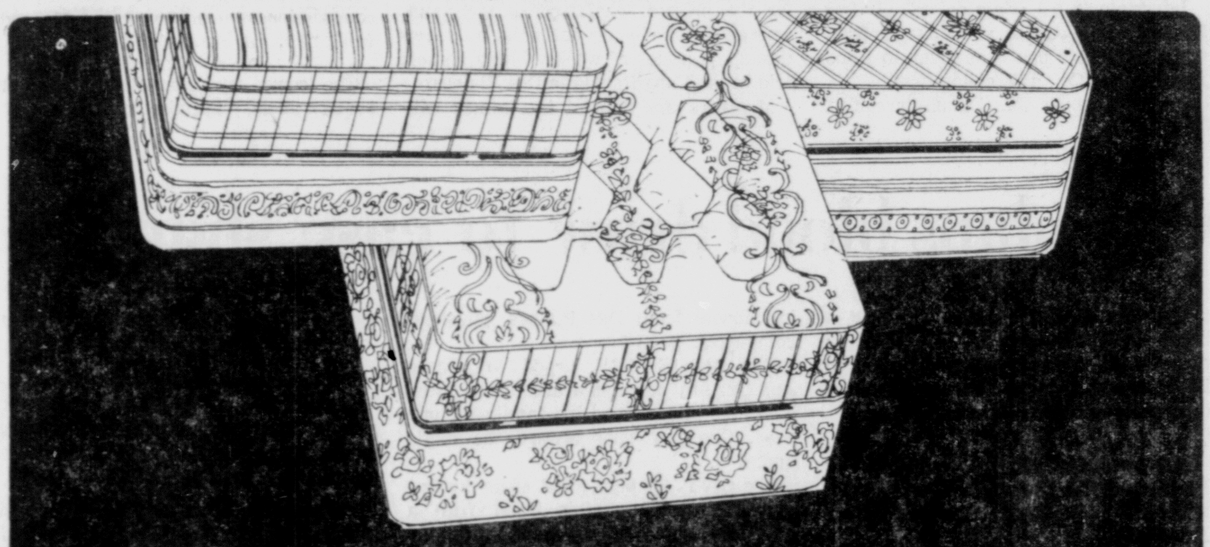

The rights of tenure may be granted to more school personnel if a bill proposed by State Rep. Aaron Jaffe, D-Skokie, becomes law.

Jaffe said last week he is now working on a bill that would give job security to non-teaching school personnel such as school administrators, social workers and psychologists. Only teachers are now granted tenure, said Jaffe, which protects them from being fired without just cause.

Teachers are usually granted tenure after working for a school district for one or two years and can only be dismissed for immorality, negligence or incompetence.

Jaffee said he feels non-teaching personnel deserve the same rights. "There are different types of employes in the school system that should be covered that really aren't covered," he said. "We're trying to work out an equitable program whereby certain people who are professionals and are doing a job ought to be protected."

Jaffee said his bill is still in the research stage and would not be presented to the Illinois General Assembly until January at the earliest. The idea for the bill grew out of his participation in the House of Representatives committee on elementary and secondary education where he heard complaints on the limited nature of the tenure law.

'Chicago welcome' prepared for Ford

Chicago planned to welcome Gerald Ford for the first time as President Monday morning by lining Michigan Avenue when he arrives to address the national convention of Veterans of Foreign Wars. Mayor Richard Daley urged residents "to accord the President a greeting which will be a demonstration of the respect that Chicagoans have always had for the leader of our nation." The President's plane will arrive at the military side of O'Hare airport at 9:20 a.m. CDT.

Plan stop order on some state payrolls

State Comptroller George Lindberg said yesterday payrolls and other expenditures in 13 state departments and agencies will be stopped until Atty. Gen. William J. Scott rules whether state lawmakers must approve some $200 million in non-appropriated state and federal funds. Lindberg said it may take a special session of the General Assembly to straighten out the budgetary "chaos."

Episcopal ordination of women invalid

The Episcopal Church's House of Bishops yesterday ruled that the ordination of 11 women as priests was invalid and said the actions of four bishops who participated in ordination services were improper. The church leaders in Chicago urged any further attempts to ordain women be delayed until the church's general convention acts on the question of whether women can become priests.

Oil companies scoff at gas price cuts

Officials of three major oil companies — Shell, Gulf and Exxon — scoffed yesterday at predictions of a 6 to 7 cent a gallon drop in the cost of gasoline in the coming months, but service stations with increased supplies began taking potshots at each other's prices. A. G. Uresti, president of the Greater Houston Service Station Association said, "Just checking around this neighborhood, I'm finding the same gasoline available a nickel cheaper than I sell it for. It's a price war."

ABA votes against immunity for Nixon

The prestigious American Bar Association Thursday voted against granting legal immunity to former President Richard M. Nixon. On a voice vote and without debate, delegates to the annual convention of the 185,000-member lawyers' association approved an anti-immunity resolution which ABA President Chesterfield Smith said resulted from the revelations about the former president and Watergate.

House works to slash mass transit aid

With President Gerald Ford threatening to veto it as inflationary, House Republicans worked yesterday to cut the $20.4 billion mass transit aid bill almost in half. No major floor opposition appeared to be surfacing, however, to a section of the bill that would allow bigger trucks and wider buses on Interstate highways — a proposal hotly opposed by the American Automobile Association.

Want health insurance before adjournment

Democratic congressional leaders indicated yesterday they would like to pass health insurance before reaching their target date for adjournment in mid-October. The Democratic leaders also agreed that when President Ford submits his nomination for vice president to Congress, the House Judiciary Committee and Senate Rules Committee would immediately start hearings on the appointment.

'French Connection' back in business

U.S. and French authorities said yesterday the "French Connection" of international heroin smuggling apparently is back in business because of Turkey's decision to resume growing opium poppies. They said the seizure of $113 million worth of heroin in New York City last week and the arrest of 10 persons in France and the U.S. was a "foretaste of things to come."

Wilson announces 'toned' nationalization

Prime Minister Harold Wilson's minority Labor government yesterday announced sweeping but toned-down plans to step up nationalization of British industry. The key proposal was establishment of a National Enterprise Board which would supervise government takeovers of the private firms. Also recommended were agreements under which the management of major companies would invite its workers as well as government representatives to discuss the firm's future on an annual basis.

Communist rockets hit Phnom Penh

Communist gunners fired 34 Chinese-made 107mm rockets into Phnom Penh yesterday in one of the heaviest such attacks of the year against the Cambodian capital. Seven persons were killed and 47 others wounded. In Vietnam, tank-led North Vietnamese troops overran the Phu Thu militia post 17 miles north of Saigon, but were driven out by counter-attacking government forces in the closest fighting to the capital in at least two years.

Prices lower in light trading

In a session marked by erratic blue chip movement, prices closed lower in light trading on the New York stock exchange. The Dow Jones average slipped 2.66 to 737.88, continuing a decline that started last Thursday. Standard and Poor's index eased 0.43 to 76.30. The price of an average common share on the NYSE declined 14 cents. Of 1,728 issues traded there were 844 declines and 455 advances. Volume amounted to 11,130,000 shares, slightly under the 11,750,000 shares Wednesday.

Turks secure top third of Cyprus

From Herald news services

With Greece saying its military was powerless to stop the advance, Turkish tank columns on Cyprus rolled into the walled port city of Famagusta, completing a triumphant march across the northern portion of the island.

The latest success left Turkey in control of one-third of the island along a line stretching from the town of Lefka in the west through Nicosia to Famagusta on the east seacoast.

That, in effect, gave Turkey on the battlefield what it had been unable to accomplish at the abortive Geneva peace conference: control of a third of the island for the Turkish Cypriots who number one-fifth of the island's 700,000 people.

President Ford was reported keeping close tabs on the situation, and Secretary of State Kissinger made urgent telephone calls to the Greek and Turkish governments, offering to make a direct U. S. effort to solve the political conflict. But for the most part, the United States and Great Britain were reported to have decided to keep hands off for the moment.

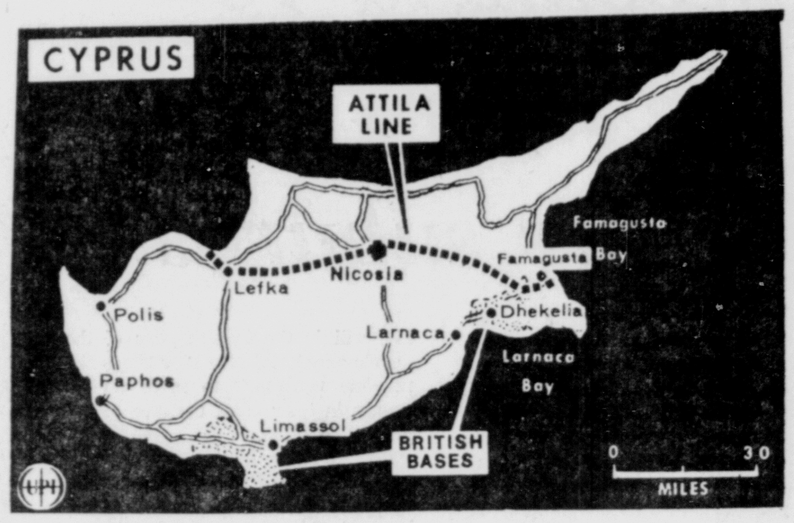

Greece, through Premier Constantine, ruled out sending troops to the island in defense of Greek Cypriots, saying "armed opposition to the Turks was impossible by reason of distance, also by accomplished facts." Greece is 500 miles from Cyprus.

Greece-U. S. relations were reported at a low ebb because of the American failure to stop the Turkish expansoin, but a Greek government spokesman dismissed early reports that Greece, in retaliation, had threatened to expel 4,000 U.S. military personnel from the country.

Elsewhere on the diplomatic front, the U. N. Security Council went into another emergency session on the crisis, in hopes of finding some way of enforcing its demand for an immediate cease-fire on Cyprus.

In military action, Turkish tanks rolled into Famagusta at nightfall, with heavy armor and warplanes battering the few remaining Greek defenders. The port was in blazes and massive clouds of smoke blackened the sky.

Turkish warplanes also bombed and strafed the capital of Nicosia again, following a day of fierce ground fighting between Turkish and Greek Cypriots.

TURKEY REPORTED victory after victory yesterday in its conquest of the Northern half of Cyprus. Greece was angered by U.S. failure to halt the Turk offensive and pushed Greek-U.S. relations to a low ebb. There was further evidence Turkey has decided to divide the island into separate Greek and Turkish areas along the 65-mile "Attila Line."

Ford flicks the anti-inflation whip

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Ford exercized the second anti-inflation veto of his seven days in office Thursday and threatened a third such veto during a hectic day of "open door" action on domestic and foreign problems.

Ford kept his whip hand out against domestic inflationary problems, as he had promised he would, even while devoting major attention to the Cyprus crisis and the lingering issue of emigration rights for Soviet Jews.

In economic matters, the President vetoed a bill providing $47 million for veterinarian programs on grounds it was too inflationary. He had already vetoed legislation raising the pay of U. S. Marshals on the same grounds.

In addition, he told a delegation of county officials visiting as part of his "open door" consultations that he would also veto the $20 billion mass transit bill unless its funding were drastically reduced.

In other actions, the President accepted the resignation of J. Fred Buzhardt, former legal counsel to President Nixon who played a major role in developing Nixon's Watergate defense strategies, and named Philip A. Buchen, an old friend and associate, as chief White House legal counsel.

On the foreign front, Ford consulted again with Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger on the explosive developments in Cyprus and Greece and issued a statement expressing strong disapproval of Turkey's military conquests in Cyprus. He urged the Turks to stop fighting and return to the Geneva negotiations with Greece.

The President also grappled with the problem of Soviets allowing Jews free emigration rights in exchange for trade concessions and indicated a compromise might be in prospect.

Meanwhile, the House Banking Committee overwhelmingly approved Ford's new Cost of Living Task Force although most committee members viewed it as a useless but harmless exercise.

The Senate Banking Committee also held a half day of hearings and prepared to quickly approve the new "jawboning" agency. The committee may try to strengthen the powers of the task force to demand information from industry, but the House committee all but rubber-stamped the original Ford request.

Subpoena Nixon; cover-up trial delay endorsed

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Special prosecutor Leon Jaworski Thursday endorsed Watergate cover-up defendants' requests to have their trial delayed because of dramatic events involving the resignation of President Nixon, who was subpoenaed hours earlier as a defense witness.

Jaworski's endorsement for a "reasonable" postponement in the scheduled Sept. 9 trial came just after defendant John D. Ehrlichman subpoenaed Nixon to appear that day as a witness for his defense. Accompanying the subpoena, mailed to Nixon's San Clemente, Calif., home, was a $302 check for "witness and mileage fees."

U. S. District Judge John J. Sirica had scheduled a hearing Monday on the requests of four cover-up defendants who sought postponement of their trial.

Ehrlichman, H. R. Haldeman and John N. Mitchell asked for delay because of the "massive" publicity surrounding Nixon's admission to his role in the cover-up and his subsequent resignation. A fourth defendant, Robert C. Mardian, filed a similar brief Thursday.

Hint Rumsfeld has chance at vice presidential post

by STEVE FORSYTH

Former Illinois congressman Donald Rumsfeld is playing his political cards close to his chest, despite repeated rumors and stories that he is in line for either the vice presidency or as President Gerald Ford's chief of staff.

Richard Cheney, temporary assistant for the transition project headed by Rumsfeld, told the Herald Thursday that Rumsfeld has a reservation for an 8 p.m. flight Wednesday back to his NATO post in Brussels, Belgium, "and he has every intention of making that flight."

Rumsfeld, as U.S. Ambassador to NATO, was summoned to Washington by Ford before the president's inauguration, and was given the task of overseeing the transition of staff and offices. Cheney said that job is nearing completion, and a report should be ready for Ford early next week.

Rumsfeld's name has been suggested by some congressmen for the vice presidential post. He served seven years in Congress, representing the old 13th District, before moving to the Nixon administration, where he eventually headed the Office of Economic Opportunity and the Cost of Living Council and was counselor to the president. When the Watergate scandal began to grow, Rumsfeld slipped out of the Nixon camp and accepted the prestigious NATO position.

If Rumsfeld is appointed to Ford's cabinet he would resume his role as confidant to the highest position in the country, although there have been reports that he would prefer a senatorial seat in Congress.

Donald Rumsfeld

Rumsfeld's report may have a significant effect on the future of the presidential staff. Cheney said the work is primarily conceptual, but has to get into the issue of personnel at some point. The aim is to retain continuity while allowing the new president to establish his own staff structure, Cheney said.

Particularly ticklish is the position of chief of staff, presently held by Gen. Alexander Haig Jr. Although he served with Nixon, his attitudes about Watergate shifted as the resignation loomed nearer, and there have been conflicting reports about the likelihood that he would be asked to stay on with Ford.

Some political observers feel that a staff position in the White House would be a political deadend for Rumsfeld, and that he will seek something better.

Park Chung-hee's wife dies after assassination try

Mrs. Park Young-soo

SEOUL (UPI) — A gunman killed the wife of South Korean President Park Chung-hee and a teenaged schoolgirl Thursday in an unsuccessful attempt to assassinate Park as he delivered a nationally televised speech in a crowded theater.

The second of the gunman's four bullets struck Mrs. Park Young-soo, 49, in the head as she sat near her husband on the stage of the National Theater. She was taken to Seoul National University Hospital where doctors operated on her for six hours.

She died at 7 p.m., 8½ hours after the shooting, with Park and the couple's three children at her bedside.

After his wife was carried from the stage, Park rose and said, "Now I will continue my speech." The television cameras refocused and Park read the remainder of his prepared text without mentioning the shooting.

Japanese police identified the gunman as Moon Sae-kwang, 22, a Korean living in Osaka, Japan, and a suspected member of a youth group opposed to the Park regime.

Moon was shot by security men and hospitalized. Chang Bong-haw, 17, was killed by a stray bullet.

Korean news media said Moon carried a Japanese passport made out to a textile worker in Osaka. Japanese police began an investigation of how Moon obtained the passport.

The motive for the attempted assassination was not immediately known but recent measures to curb opposition to the Park government have sparked protests at home and abroad.

Park was half-way through his 20-minute speech commemorating the 29th anniversary of Korea's liberation from Japan when the gunman rose from his front-row seat and opened fire, bringing screams from the 2,500 persons in the audience.

Ford expected to name Roudebush VA head

• When President Ford addresses the annual Veterans of Foreign Wars convention in Chicago Monday, he's expected to make an announcement that will gladden the hearts of all attending: that Richard Roudebush — ex-Indiana Congressman and former VFW commander — is his choice to head the Veterans Admistration. Roudebush, who has been vigorously backed for the job by the VFW, would replace Donald Johnson, who resigned a few months ago under criticism of mismanagement.

• Mrs. Ford yesterday announced an appointment of her own: Nancy Howe, who once sold White House guide books, as her personal secretary. Mrs. Howe has been working for Mrs. Ford since the start of Gerald Ford's vice presidency.

• The only suspect ever tried in the assassination of President John F. Kennedy — former New Orleans trade executive Clay Shaw — is dead at age 60 of cancer. Shaw, who had been ill since February, was ordered arrested in 1967 by former District Attorney Jim Garrison on a charge that he helped plot the JFK killing with accomplices in New Orleans. Shaw was acquitted in 1969 and filed a $5 million damage suit against Garrison, which was due for hearing in federal court next month.

Richard Roudebush

• If he had it to do all over again, Boston attorney James D. St. Clair still would accept the job as former President Richard Nixon's Watergate lawyer. St. Clair, who wrapped up his duties after Nixon resigned, described the experience as a "long and difficult time" and conceded he thought a lot about the question of whether he'd go through it again.

• American business ingenuity knows no bounds. Miami builder John Priestes — fresh from a six-month prison term for offering bribes to an aide of Florida's Sen. Edward Gurney — and Bernard Barker, Eugenio Martinez and Virgilio Gonzales — agents of the Watergate burglary team — have announced plans for a housing development in central Florida. The four, all alums of the federal prison at Eglin Air Force Base, will call it "Watergate Hills." Because, said Priestes, "there is a lot of water and a lot of hills there."

• Montana's Mike Mansfield went into the Senate record books Thursday. He completed 13 years and 225 days as Democratic leader, longer than anyone has ever served in a Senate leadership post. He passed the record of Arkansas Democrat Joseph T. Robinson, who served as a majority and minority leader from 1923-37.

• Outrage is mild for describing the feelings of Rep. Earl Landgrebe, R-Ind., victim in one of the most bizarre hoaxes involving the prestigious Congressional Record. In his name, someone filed an entry suggesting President Ford pick Richard Nixon as his vice president and then resign, returning Nixon to the presidency so that "our 38th president will leave office with a spotless record and will have courageously taken one remarkable action for which he shall never be forgotten." Landgrebe, known as perhaps Nixon's most faithful backer in Congress, was not at all amused — and neither were several other representatives who called for investigation and prosecution.

• All in the family: Queen Elizabeth II elevated Princess Anne to Dame Grand Cross of the Royal Victorian Order for her "calm and brave" behavior during the shot-filled attempt to kidnap her five months ago. Anne's husband, Capt. Mark Phillips, was made a Commander of the Order for his exemplary conduct in the incident, and her lady-in-waiting, Rowena Brassey became a member of the order, fourth class.

Woodfield 76— the metro center of the suburbs?

PLANNERS BELIEVE the drawing card for Woodfield 76 will be 200,000 square feet of prime commercial space just west of the office-recreational areas fronting on Golf Road. They expect specialized shops, restaurants of many types and other quality stores to locate in that sector of the project. A 700-room Hyatt Convention hotel and Schaumburg's cultural center also are planned there.

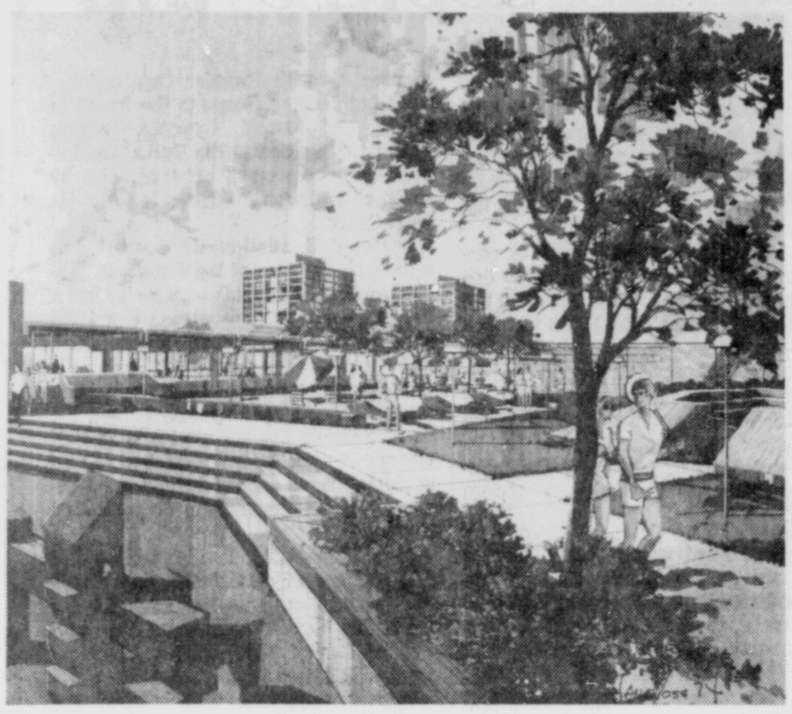

Residential development will flank recreation space on the western portion of the project. Planned there are 3,500 apartment units, although developers say, economic forecasting indicates the project could support at least 2,000 more residential units.

Bennett said tax impact studies indicate three Schaumburg area school systems, Schaumburg Township Dist. 54, and high school districts 211 and 214, will in the twelfth year of the development "receive nine times the revenue necessary to meet an increase in their costs because of our project."

But he also believes community participation is the key to success of Woodfield 76, and he asked the Village of Schaumburg to become a partner in the venture.

BENNETT EXPECTS the village to issue revenue bonds to provide:

- All utilities and a domestic water system.
- Design and construct all necessary external roads.
- Design, construct, operate and maintain an expandable "people-mover" serving the development and linking it initially with Woodfield.
- Provide public transportation between the project and two nearby rail stations.

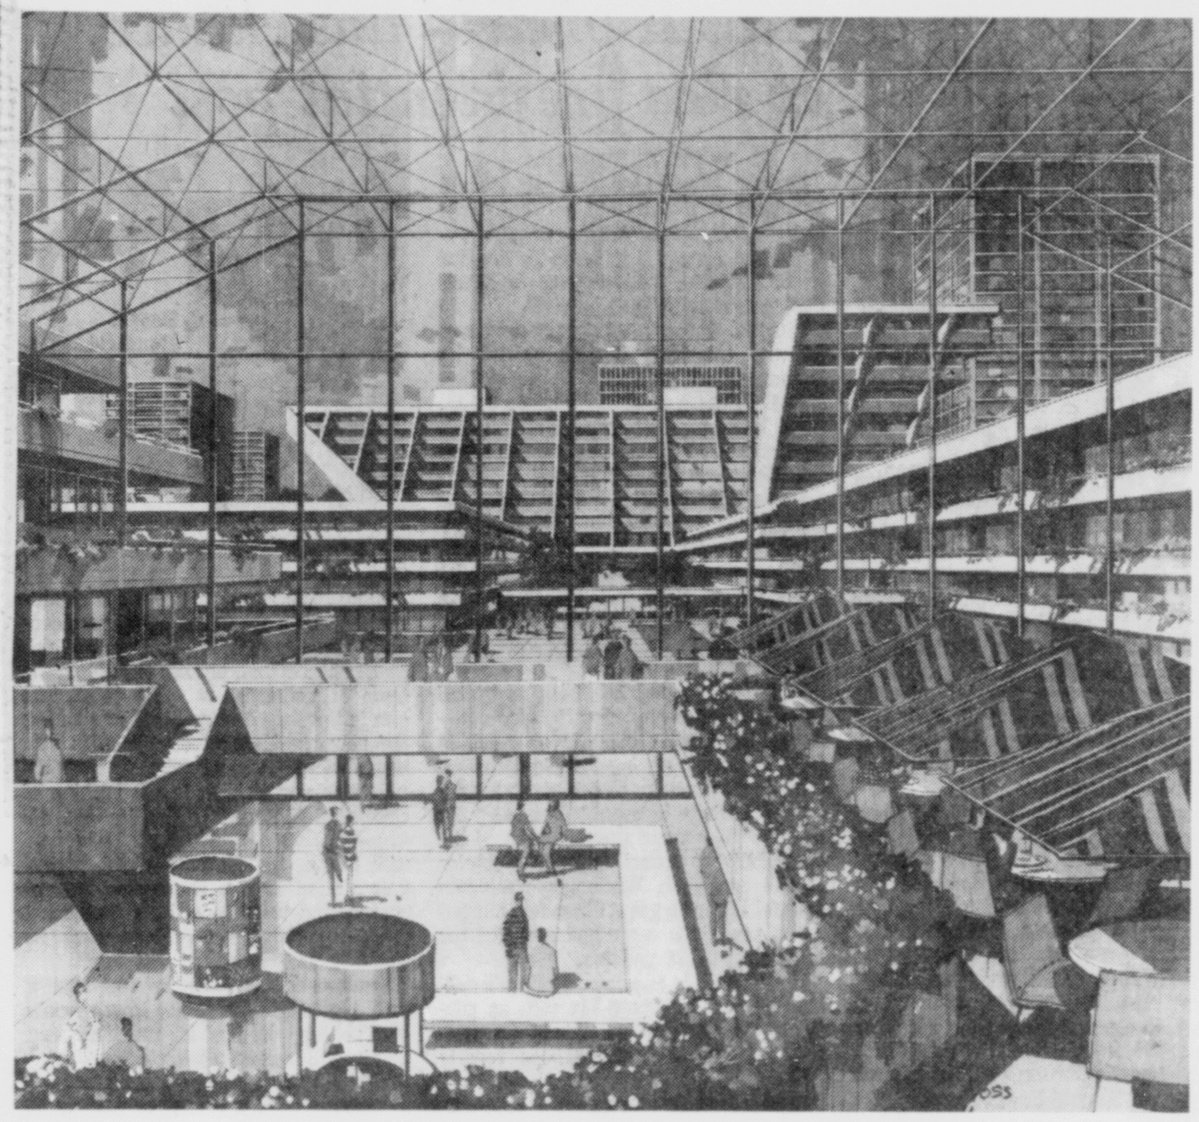

RECREATIONAL areas will interrelate with residential-commercial space at Woodfield 76, a $250 million project.

- Design, construct, operate and maintain a 900-car parking facility.

An ordinance establishing the new required district is now being studied by zoning board of appeals members who are concerned about broad powers contained in the document and their apparent lack of control over the project. Zoners also are thinking about future developers who may apply for the zoning if it is created.

Bennett feels it necessary to have the "freedom and flexibility" he requests in order to carry out the Woodfield 76 concept, though he agrees that as yet the number of buildings, building height and many other details of the multi-million dollar project cannot be defined.

A COMMERCIAL "atrium" will link office and hotel facilities in Woodfield 76, a 237-acre "metro center" being considered by Schaumburg officials. Developers believe the proposed complex could "rival" Chicago's Loop and provide a vital commercial link in the Northwest suburbs.

River Trails pupils will register Aug. 22, 23, 26

Registration for new and continuing students in River Trails Dist. 26 will take place Aug. 22, 23 and 26 at each district school. Classes in the district begin Sept. 3.

Al Levin, director of curriculum, said due to computer difficulties in completing mailing labels, packets containing registration information may not reach parents in time to notify them of the registration dates. If the packets are not received by parents before the dates, they are urged to register their children in person on one of the registration dates.

If registration packets are received before the above listed dates, parents may mail in registration forms instead of registering students in person.

Levin said in either case the packets, which contain forms for insurance, student fees, emergency information cards and parent handbooks, will be delivered to parents.

Schools where children may register include River Trails Junior High, 1000 Wolf Rd.; Bond School, 350 Wolf Rd.; Euclid School, 1211 Wheeling Rd.; Feehanville School, 1400 E. Kensington Rd.; Indian Grove School, 1340 N. Burning Bush Ln.; Park View School, 805 N. Burning Bush Ln.

Township urged to delay projects until the court determines the legality of the expense.

He also mentioned to the board a recent opinion by Illinois Atty. Gen. William J. Scott that townships must comply with Illinois law for funding programs with their shares of federal revenue.

The alcoholism unit has been budgeted $50,000 in revenue sharing to operate as a counseling and referral service under the Maine Township Mental Health Assn.

Illinois law states that mental health associations and alcoholism councils serving townships can be funded by revenue-sharing funds if they have been chartered for at least a year. Although the council has been organized since early this year, state officials only chartered the unit in May.

Tuttle expressed concern about the youth committee's plan to fund various youth-oriented groups saying he "could find nothing in state law that authorizes them to make grants to youth organizations."

COMMITTEE MEMBERS were hoping to spend their $48,000 in revenue sharing on youth groups, according to Kay Korff, Des Plaines, committee chairman.

She said the money was to be distributed among the Des Plaines Police Dept. Boys Club, the Northwest Suburban YMCA, and the Northwest Suburban Day Care Center, all in Des Plaines.

Also under consideration for funding are the Maine-Niles Recreation Assn. for the Handicapped and youth guidance branch of the Campus Life organization that operates in Maine Township.

Mrs. Korff said township officials are waiting to find out if they may legally fund the agencies before the money is spent.

If the committee is unable to fund the existing groups once the pending court matter is decided, Mrs. Korff said the group will get a coordinator and start their own youth programs.

Pets to race for prizes

Grand prix for critters set for Saturday at shop

Galloping gerbils!?

Small furry animals will compete Saturday in races at Animal Kingdom pet shop, 1108 Algonquin Rd.

As part of the 30th anniversary of Animal Kingdom stores, Bob and Sandy Hoffman will host races for hampsters, mice and gerbils at 2 p.m. Children can preregister their hot-footed pets by stopping at the shop and filling out a blank. Registration will also be taken Saturday before race time.

Ribbons and prizes will be awarded to winners. The fastest critter from each category will compete for a tri-colored ribbon and prize. The animals will race on a specially designed track. Owners may not touch their pets while they are racing but may blow at them.

Next weekend the Hoffmans will present "The Silent World of Fish" at 2 p.m. Saturday.

Experts on marine and fresh water fish will speak on raising tropical fish.

A puppet show will be held the following week.

City may have to issue $4 million in water bonds

Des Plaines aldermen will be faced Monday with the choice of issuing more than $4 million in water revenue bonds this year and refinancing $1.8 million in outstanding bonds, or waiting until January and taking a gamble on costing the city more money.

The city needs the money this year, because aldermen recently agreed to pay for a new water tank to be built by Nov. 15. Because bids were awarded and the contracts were issued, the city "could stand a claim for breach of contract," if it backs out of the agreement City Corporation Counsel Robert DiLeonardi said Wednesday.

The tank is part of a city water systems improvement project which was planned 18 months ago at an estimated cost of $1.8 million. Bids opened earlier this month gave costs for two phases of the project which were twice the original estimates. The project is to be funded from the sale of more than $4 million in water revenue bonds.

IF THE CITY ISSUES the water bonds this year, it is required to refinance $1.89 million in outstanding bonds, according to a covenant in those other bond issues.

However, if the new bonds are not issued until January, the older bonds will not have to be refinanced. According to the planned bond issue, the city intends to pay no more than 7½ per cent interest. By Januaary, the going interest rate could be higher, and thus cost the city more, bond consultant Edward Benjamin explained.

Because construction costs for the water tank and estimates for a pumping station have increased, aldermen have anticipated other construction costs will go up, too. Benjamin is in the process of estimating what the costs would be in January, figuring on between a 20 to 40 per cent increase. He said he hopes to have the computation done before Monday night's city council meeting. The council may have a committee-of-the-whole meeting before the council session to further discuss the bond revenue issue.

If the aldermen vote to issue the bonds this year, they have two options. The preliminary ordinance calls for $4.175 million in bonds to be sold, but the aldermen can raise that figure. Or, they can include a paragraph, stating that the city may sell a limited additional amount of bonds, if needed to complete the project.

For the city to refinance the $1.89 million in outstanding bonds, it could take that same amount from what it received from the sale of the new bonds, and invest it in government bonds that would mature in time for the money to be used to pay off the old water bonds. The city is now paying between 3½ and 3 3/8 per cent interest on the old bonds and would earn about 7½ per cent from the government. The difference in the interest would be held in escrow until all the outstanding bonds are paid, and the surplus would then go into the water fund account, Benjamin said.

Crash victim listed as 'fair'

A Des Plaines man was in fair condition Thursday at Lutheran General Hospital after a two-car accident that involved him and four other persons at Campground and Algonquin foads.

In fair condition was Steven M. Wilt, 21, 400 W. Touhy Ave. A hospital spokesman said he was in intensive care Wednesday evening but was being transferred from the unit yesterday.

Taken to Holy Family Hospital were Georgene Andersen, 27, 2932 River Rd., in River Grove. She had a slight injury. Her son Steven, 3, also went to Holy Family with minor bruises. Both were released after treatment, according to a spokesman.

A Des Plaines youth, of 2017 Plainfield Dr., Kevin Fisher, 17, was treated for a sprained thumb at Holy Family and released while Michael J. Blanchard, also 17, of 1878 Pine St., in Des Plaines was not injured.

According to Police reports, the crash occurred when the car containing Mrs. Andersen and the child was struck by the auto driven by Wilt as she was about to make a left turn onto Campground from Algonquin Road.

The impact of the collision pushed Wilt's car across the intersection and through a section of fence by a forest preserve area.

Fisher and Blanchard were passengers in Wilt's car, said police.

Wilt was ticketed for failing to yield to a left turn.

Would-be robber flees motel

Police were looking for a man who fled the DeVille Motel in Des Plaines after unsuccessfully trying to rob a desk clerk. He ran out upon discovering there was no money in a cash drawer.

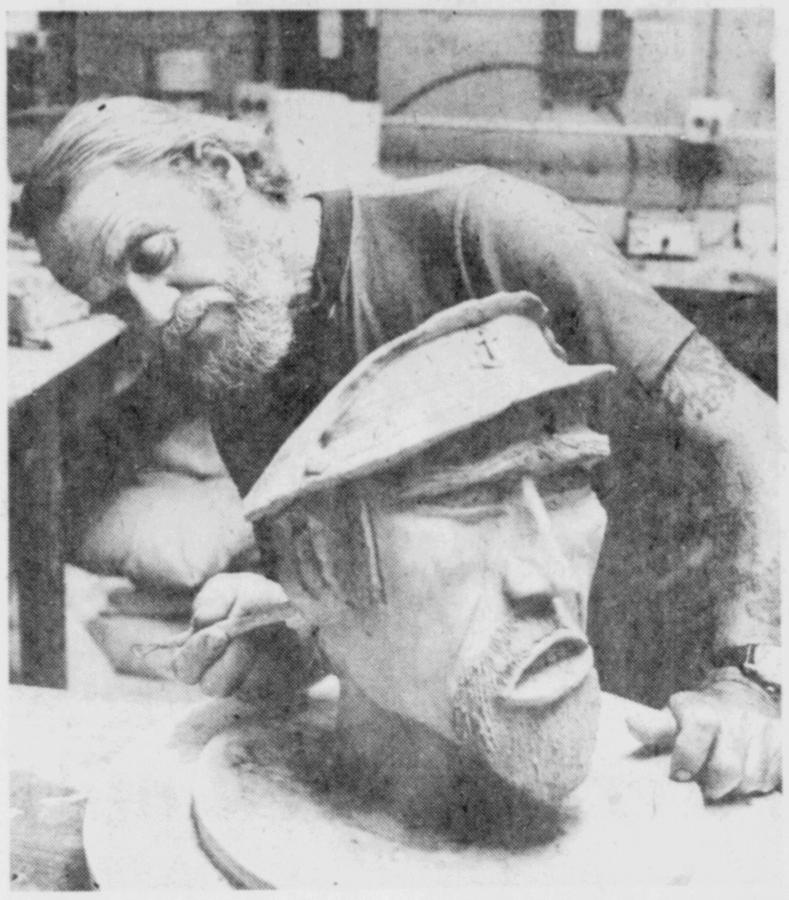

The attempted holdup took place early Thursday when the man came into the hotel lobby, 1275 Lee St., at about 5 a.m. and climbed over a three-foot counter and ordered the clerk, Edith Ewasko, to stand aside.

The holdup man, who carried no weapons, according to reports, got inside when an apparently unsuspecting clerk buzzed him in through an electrically locked door.

The woman told police the man asked her out of the way, climbed the counter for change to buy cigarets then ordered and reached into the cash drawer.

Police said the man then ran out when he saw the drawer was empty, and headed north across the parking lot.

He was described to police as approximately 23 years old, 5 feet 6 inches tall and weighing 130 pounds. He had short brown hair, and wore a white T-shirt with blue jeans and gloves. He also was described as having a bad cough.

THREE DIMENSIONAL art. Ted Mozdren of Des Plaines works on his sculpture in an art class at Oakton Community College this summer. The sculptures range from the realistic to abstract, says teacher Robert Stanley. The idea is to "get people to do their own things," he says.

Coroner's jury rules Paroubek death accidental

A Cook County coroner's jury ruled as accidental the death of downtown redevelopment leader James I. Paroubek, who was killed in an auto accident Aug. 1.

In a verdict returned Friday in an inquest at Oehler Funeral Home in Des Plaines, the jury ruled Paroubek, 51, suffered a heart attack at the wheel due to a coronary artery disease.

Paroubek was driving south on Lee Street on his way to O'Hare Airport to catch a plane for a Detroit business trip when his auto went out of control and struck a light pole just south of Forest Avenue.

In addition to his involvement in the redevelopment push, he owned Ace Hardware stores in Des Plaines, Arlington Heights and Rolling Meadows.

Paroubek, a firm believer in the proposed overhaul of the city's business district, was president of the Des Plaines Redevelopment Assn., and was a major figure in the formation of the Des Plaines Tomorrow Corp., a group responsible for acquiring property vital to redevelopment efforts.

Registration confusion brings calls

Some confusion over Elk Grove Township Dist. 59 school registration — or rather the lack of registration has prompted a number of calls to the district administration center.

A change in procedures in Dist. 59 over the last few years has eliminated the need for registration for school each year, except in the case of those new to the district, according to Arthur Perry, assistant superintendent administrative services in Dist. 59.

Rental charges for textbooks in the district were eliminated more than a year ago. Transportation fees are billed directly by mail and arrangements for milk are made at school after the school year starts. Registration forms that provide family information are permanent and don't have to be renewed every year, according to Perry.

PERRY SAID THAT parents in the district with school-age children will receive a letter from their building principal before school opens, providing all necessary information such as transportation, student insurance, home room assignments.

Families which have moved into Dist. 59, which covers parts of Elk Grove Village, Des Plaines, Mount Prospect and Arlington Heights, should register before school opens however, according to Perry.

Registration for the whole family can be taken care of at once at any district school or the district administration center, 2123 S. Arlington Heights Rd. in Arlington Heights.

School for District 59 students this year starts Sept. 3.

YOU'RE LOOKING at a winner. Robert P. Mazur, 31, of Momence, is the first weekly bonanza winner of the Illinois State Lottery. Called at his work in an ironworks, Mazur was told he had won the $300,000 prize.

$50,000 WINNER Marguite B. Head gasped when they called her name. The first big drawing of the lottery was held Thursday at the Illinois State Fairgrounds. Mrs. Head was one of a dozen or more big winners.

It happened at the State Fair

The day $1,000 bills were handed out

by BARRY SIGALE

Dapper Dan Walker, in red-striped sportcoat, was waiting at the end of the yellow brick road and the grins were from ear to ear as the sun shined and the music played, because this was Payday in the Land of Plenty and thousand-dollar bills were free.

It was all there for the taking at the Illinois State Fairgrounds Thursday on this the first day of a really big drawing in the Illinois State Lottery.

And for me, the official representative of the Jose Blanco family of Hoffman Estates, there was more than just a twinge of excitement at winning $10,000 for some nice people back home.

The really big money went to another part of the state Thursday — an ironworker named Mazur won the top $300,000 prize and a woman with 11 children from Chicago came in next with $50,000. But $10,000 — that's not bad either — went to the Blanco family and for the family and this reporter it was as sweet and cuddly as a newborn baby.

WINNING THE MONEY was a feat considering the odds, and the Blancos say they will spend their $10,000 wisely — for doctor bills, their son's education and the hundreds of other things today's families need to keep their heads above water.

The Blancos took their place with 35 other Illinoisans in State Lottery history, as the game's first big bundle of cash was given to lucky participants who qualified for $528,000 worth of prizes — all in cash.

And believe it or not, it's not that easy to coin $10,000.

Travel down that golden highway to Springfield in a state-chartered limousine, hole up for a night at the regal but decaying St. Nicholas Hotel and then show up bright and spiffy the next morning for a shot at the biggest pot of greenbacks any normal person will ever see.

THE HARD PART was the wait. "Don't you feel it in the pit of your stomach?" said a visibly nervous contestant sitting in a row of qualifiers waiting for the drawing to begin.

"What they are doing is trying to impress us," said another hopeful during the delay in getting to the $300,000 payoff. "And the poor guy that wins is going to have a heart attack."

A PHONE CALL from the governor came with the news that R. P. Mazur of Momence had won $300,000 in the Illinois State Lottery. The winner told Gov. Daniel Walker he did not attend the drawing Thursday in Springfield because he did not want to lose a day's work.

Of course, he didn't have one — but that was because the winner was working in calm isolation in a Momence ironworks. The winner didn't make the final drawing for $300,000 because he didn't want to take off a day of work.

But no-shows count, too in the state lottery and maybe the calmest way to go through an ordeal like this is to stay hard at work and pick up the cash later.

The sun beats down on the row of contestants like a curse. The governor and assorted state officials are there; the state fair is blaring in the background, but all that is a snap of the fingers compared to the waiting for the prizes to be announced. It is fun the way a firecracker is fun — you can't wait until it's over.

THERE WAS A LOT of camaraderie among bonanaza winners as the time came close. They pulled for each other and those who arrived in the state's limousine were friends the way people in the same foxhole are friends.

And suddenly we were there, at the end of the yellow brick road. As the balls with slips of names flipped open, each winner found out the depth of his appreciation for the state lottery.

In my case — and on behalf of the Blanco family — it is nice to be grateful to the tune of $10,000. Being appreciative of a cool $300 grand would be even nicer.

Is the lottery a good thing? It's hard to say because objective judgments don't come at the same time you know you've been part of winning $10,000.

If there is value to the circus atmosphere and the hoopla, it might be in the way people treat each other and the way quiet, honest folk happily come away with touches of humility.

In fact, maybe the best thing about being a winner on lottery day is that tingle you get before the thing even begins.

IT WAS LIKE that on the way down to Springfield with a car full of potential winners and their companions.

Loose and relaxed, confident beyond words, and eager to get on with the business at hand is the best way to describe that air-conditioned, bump-free ride to the money tree.

A few of the passengers even suggested we all return to the state fair every year from now on, winners or not.

It was a nice thought, nice because people seem to hang together in good times as well ss bad, in jubilation as well as sorrow.

Too bad the Blancos couldn't be there to share the fun. But of course, they have $10,000.

And all that is left for me is the memory.

Luau to raise funds for tumor research

A luau featuring dinner, swimming and dancing will be held at the Sheraton O'Hare South in Schiller Park Aug. 24 to raise money for the Assn. for Brain Tumor Research.

Cocktails will be served from 6:30 p.m., followed by dinner at 8 p.m. Tickets are $35 per couple with proceeds earmarked for medical research and public information on brain tumors. The one-year-old association is a non-profit national group founded by volunteers in the Chicago area.

Brain tumors are the second greatest cause of death from cancer-related illnesses in children under 15. From ages 15 to 34, brain tumors are among the top five causes of cancer-related deaths.

For luau reservations or information about the association, phone 286-5571.

Cheerleaders win trophies

Palatine High School and Prospect High School cheerleaders won individual and team trophies at United States Cheerleader's Association USCA) camps this summer. Both cheerleading teams are eligible to compete in USCA national championships Aug. 17 in Lansing, Mich.

Palatine High School cheerleaders won a first place team trophy at a camp in Valparaiso University, Indiana, while the Prospect High School cheerleaders won a fifth place team trophy at a Wisconsin camp.

Karen Nordecchia of Palatine won a third place individual trophy at the Valparaiso camp. She is eligible to compete for the "Miss Teenage Cheerleader U.S.A." title in Lansing.

Computers to be discussed

Computer experts will discuss the effect of computers on everyday living now and in future generations in a two-part radio series sponsored by Harper College on radio station WWMM-FM at 8 a.m. and 9 p.m. Aug. 18 and 25.

Jay Singlemann, assistant professor of data processing at Harper will moderate the discussion on "Focus Northwest." Contributing to the discussion will be Phyllis J. Moss, coordinator of data processing for High School Dist. 211, James R. Gerdes, systems and data processing manager for MacLean-Fogg Lock-Nut Co., Mundelein, Ill., and Robert W. Chantry, director of computer services at Harper College.

Harper child care planned

Parents attending daytime classes at Harper College this year no longer have to worry about finding babysitters for their children. Harper's Office of Community Services is sponsoring a daily child care service each week day during the college year.

The child care service fee is 75 cents per hour and reservations must be made in advance. The service is not connected with the Child Development program's preschool lab. It will begin when Harper classes start Aug. 26.

Gilson named energy chief

Paul Gilson, trustee at Oakton Community College has been appointed regional director of energy conservation for the Federal Energy Administration.

Gilson received the appointment Tuesday effective Aug. 26. In his new job he will promote conservation of fuels such as coal, natural gas and fuel oil by government agencies, private industries and businesses in a six state area, Illinois, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Michigan, Ohio and Indiana.

Gibson has served as an Oakton trustee since the college was formed in 1969 and he will continue his duties here. He will resign his present position as director of training for the Occupational Safety and Health Administration in Rosemont.

Gimmick diets don't help, and they can cause harm

by Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

Recently in our paper there was an article about a new vitamin E plus C diet that was supposed to give fast weight loss. Reading the article convinced me that it was another scheme to defraud gullible fat people who were so eager to reduce that they were willing to try anything. I am enclosing this article, and I hope you will comment on it, either pro or con, according to its merits.

I can't find much fault in your impression. These ads are now sweeping the country, listed as a "new vitamin E discovery" or the E plus C diet. The list of foods in the diet shows that it is another low-carbohydrate diet of the same type used by Dr. Atkins or earlier by Dr. Taller in "Calories Don't Count." Dr. Taller ran into legal problems with his diet, and the Atkins diet has been branded by knowledgeable and leading nutritionists in the country as unscientific and dangerous.

Such diets work because the person eats fewer calories. Many high protein foods, lean steak for example, contain a lot of water. Learn raw round steak is 70 per cent water and a pound has only 600 calories.

These diets also cause the body to lose too much salt through the kidneys. Your body is more than 50 per cent water normally (your lean muscles are also 70 per cent water), and when you lose salt, water goes with it. The loss of too much salt and water leads to fatigue, faintness and a chemical disturbance of the body. You can recover from this by adding carbohydrates in a normal amount to your diet and then regain your normal amount of salt and water.

THE VITAMINS in the so-called E and C diet do not do a thing to cause a person to lose weight. That is pure hokum. It is a good idea to take vitamins, though, if one is on a poor or unbalanced diet that limits all those important vegetables, cereals, fruits and milk with their essential vitamins and minerals. Such unbalanced diets are deficient in vitamins and minerals.

The ad you sent me contends one can lose a pound a day. That may be true if you lose too much of your water and salt or if you start losing your important muscle mass. That means loss of protein from your body. There are 3,500 calories in a pound of fat. Even if you ate nothing at all and were starved completely, your body would not use that many calories a day so you can't lose a pound of fat a day with any of these diets. The misleading statement is "a pound a day," but the question is: a pound of what? You have to be very active to use 3,500 calories a day, and if you are starving you won't feel like being that active. When you see any ad stating you will lose a pound a day, raise your index of suspicion to the red alert level.

If you lose muscle and cells from vital organs in the body, you are in trouble. Muscle tissue uses more calories even when it is resting than fat tissue does. Keeping a good muscular body helps you keep from getting fat. Unsound diets that cause you to lose part of your muscles fix your body so you use less calories at rest. Then you have to eat a lot less to keep from getting fat. These diets then make it likely that you will have a diet and obesity problem thereafter.

Maria Scalzitti

Funeral services will be Saturday for Maria Scalzitti, nee Renieri, who died Wednesday at the Americana Nursing Home in Arlington Heights after an extended illness. She was 80.

Mrs. Scalzitti had lived in the Arlington Heights area for 14 years. She was born Nov. 3, 1893, in Scontrone, Italy.

Visitation will be from 1 to 10 p.m. today at Matz Funeral Home, 410 E. Rand Rd., Mount Prospect. A procession will leave the funeral home at 9:15 a.m. Saturday for a 10 a.m. mass at St. Mary Church in Buffalo Grove. Burial will be at All Saints Cemetery in Des Plaines.

Mrs. Scalzitti was preceded in death by her husband, Pietro, and a daughter, Clara Pontarelli. She is survived by a daughter, Lucy DiValerio of Arlington Heights; two sons, August of Wheeling and Dr. Peter of Long Grove; 13 grandchildren, and 16 great-grandchildren.

Amanda M. Hansen

Amanda M. Hansen, 91, of Bensenville, died Wednesday at Alexian Brothers Medical Center, Elk Grove Village.

Survivors include a sister, Josephine Freeman of Des Plaines; three daughters, Harriet Stahmer and Lillian Merkel, both of Wisconsin, and Grace DiDomenico, Glendale Heights; a son, George E. Hansen, of Country Club Hills; 12 grandchildren; 20 great-grandchildren, and two great-grandchildren.

Visitation will be until 11 a.m today at the Geil's Funeral Home, Bensenville and from noon until the time of services at 1:30 p.m. at the Bensenville Bible Church.

Burial will be in Elmwood Park Cemetery, River Grove.

Godfrey G. Ams

Visitation is being held from 10 a.m. to 9:30 p.m. today for Godfrey G. Ams, a former Palatine resident, at Ahlgrim and Sons, 201 N. Northwest Hwy., Palatine.

Mr. Ams, 52, died Monday in El Paso, Tex. He was born Jan. 26, 1922.

Surviving are his wife, Betty nee Smith, and sister-in-law, Hellen McAllister of Palatine.

Funeral services will be held at 9:30 a.m. Saturday at Ahlgrim and Sons and mass will be at 10 a.m. at St. Theresa Church, Palatine. Burial will be at All Saints Cemetery, Des Plaines.

Adele L. Schlangen

Visitation will be from 5-9 p.m. today for Adele L. Schlangen, nee Wehmhoefer, 72, of Wheeling, at the Kolssak of Wheeling Funeral Home, 189 S. Milwaukee Ave., Wheeling.

Mrs. Schlangen was pronounced dead on arrival at Holy Family Hospital Wednesday after suffering a heart attack. She had lived in Wheeling for two years after moving from Chicago.

She is survived by her husband, Henry G.; three children, Henry C. (Marlene), Leonard (Joy), and Edward (Carol), all of Wheeling, and 15 grandchildren.

Funeral services will be at 9:30 a.m. from the Kolssak of Wheeling Funeral Home to St. Joseph the Worker Church in Wheeling for a 10 a.m. mass. Interment will be at All Saints Cemetery, Des Plaines.

Daniel A. Nattress

Memorial services for Daniel Alex Nattress, 12, who died July 26 from injuries sustained in an accident at the Singing River Ranch, Questa, N.M., will be conducted at 3 p.m. Sunday, at Community Presbyterian Church, 407 N. Main, Mount Prospect.

The Rev. John Tapper of Mundelein and the Rev. Robert Stanton of Milwaukee will officiate at services. The family requests that flowers be omitted.

The boy is survived by his parents, LeRoy William Jr. and Sallie Nattress; a sister, Karen; three brothers, LeRoy William, III, Robert and Jon; paternal grandfather, the Rev. LeRoy Nattress of Parmouth, Calif., and maternal grandmother, Mrs. Lucille Lawson of La Crescenta, Calif.

Gifts in memory of Daniel may be made to the Memorial Fund of Community Presbyterian Church.

Bessie E. Okon

Funeral services will be Saturday for Bessie E. Okon, nee Oleniczak, who died Wednesday at Holy Family Hospital in Des Plaines.

Mrs. Okon, a housewife, was a resident of Mount Prospect for three years. She was born in Chicago.

Visitation will be from 2 to 10 p.m. today at Friedrich Funeral Home, 320 W. Central Rd., Mount Prospect. Prayers will be at 9:30 a.m. Saturday at the funeral home, followed by a 10 a.m. mass at St. Cecilia Church, Golf and Meier roads, Mount Prospect. Burial will be at Maryhill Cemetery, Niles.

Mrs. Okon was preceded in death by her husband, Joseph. She is survived by a son, Eugene (Esther) of Indianapolis, Ind; a daughter, Florence (George) Hock of Mount Prospect; six grandchildren; a sister, Stella Rammel of Chicago, and a brother, Leon Oleniczak, also of Chicago.

The family requests in lieu of flowers, memorials to the Cancer Fund would be appreciated.

Herald opinion

Our school children deserve a safe bus ride

The U.S. government should move quickly to make certain that all students in this country who ride school buses are assured of a safe ride.

It isn't enough for the federal government to pass guidelines, such as Standard 17. It should speedily implement that guideline, and thus help end the patchwork of school bus safety that exists all over the United States.

In Illinois, for example, there have been several half-way measures passed in the just-concluded legislative sessions to improve the overall school bus safety picture. A local legislator, State Senator Bradley Glass, R-Northfield, sponsored legislation which would require private and parochial school buses to fall under licensing and marking requirements common to public school buses.

Glass' bills widen governmental control of school bus safety, but its passage is set against the state legislature's dismal record of rejection of bus safety legislation. Bills to require seat padding, elimination of face-ripping rivets and requirement of seat belts have been killed by the legislature.

Apparently, legislators in Illinois aren't concerned enough about safety to mandate it for school buses, and that's why the federal government should speed up the implementation of Standard 17, which would set guidelines for safety in school buses.

This proposal, however, won't become effective until 1977, at the earliest. Designed by the National Highway Traffic Safety Assn., Standard 17 provides guidelines for the states to follow in the equipment and operation of school buses.

Proponents of the measure have reported opposition from the school bus industry, which is reluctant to face the changes which could be necessary under the law. So, enforcement has been delayed until 1977, at least.

There are a variety of debates about what constitutes safety in a school bus. Critics argue that seat belts, regarded by some as a vital safety measure, would be ignored by youthful passengers.

But the critical point is school bus safety isn't a matter of nitpicking about the behavior of children. Structural changes can ease the increasing toll of school bus accidents, but the school bus industry has been slow to adopt them. Therefore, the force of law is needed to insure such protective measures.

Glass' bills are commendable, of course, but what's really needed in this nation is the assurance that every student who rides to school in a big yellow bus is assured of a safe ride. That's the least we can demand that the government do for our children.

12 men toppled Nixon

They broke open case

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Without the action of a dozen men, the public may never have known about the Watergate scandal and Richard M. Nixon would still be president.

The 12 men are:

Frank Wills — The security guard who discovered a door at the Watergate complex had been taped open on June 17, 1972. He called the police, and five men were arrested that night inside the Democratic National committee headquarters.

Bob Woodward and Carl Bernstein — The two Washington Post reporters who followed up the burglary story and pursued it into the Oval Office of the White House.

John J. Sirica — the U.S. District Court Judge who refused to believe the burglary was just the work of seven men, some of them employed by the Nixon re-election campaign. His threat of long sentences to the burglars if they did not tell the whole story brought out the first public disclosures that the White House had been involved.

James W. McCord — One of the Watergate burglars, McCord was the first to crack. In a letter to Sirica March 20, 1973, McCord revealed White House involvement.

Sam J. Ervin Jr. — The chairman of the Senate Watergate committee brought the scandal into the homes of the American people. The summer-long televised hearings brought bombshell after bombshell raining down on the Nixon administration.

John W. Dean III — Former counsel to the president, Nixon's main accuser. He told of how he warned the President on March 21, 1973, there "was a cancer growing on the presidency" that could destroy the administration. His charges were attacked vigorously by the White House, but in the end his story could not be shaken.

Alexander P. Butterfield — On July 16, 1973, this former White House aide made the most crucial disclosure of the investigation. Nixon had ordered a taping system installed in his offices, and there were recordings of all the conversations that would eventually confirm the President of the United States ordered the cover-up of the Watergate burglary.

Archibald Cox — The first Watergate prosecutor. Cox refused to back down when Nixon ordered him not to subpoena the Watergate tapes. Nixon fired Cox, but in the "firestorm" that followed, he gave up the first 19 tapes, and the first evidence of presidential involvement was disclosed.

Leon Jaworski — Picked to succeed Cox, there was initially a fear he would not press the investigation. But he proved just as firm as his predecessor, and he fought the tapes case all the way to the Supreme Court, winning 8-0.

Peter W. Rodino Jr. — Called by his critics a "hack politician" from Newark, the House Judiciary Committee chairman guided three articles of impeachment through the panel. His crucial decision not to recommend impeachment unless the vote was bipartisan insured that a vote by the full House, if it had come to that, would have sent the case to the Senate for trial.

Richard M. Nixon — He ordered the taping system installed. Without it there would never have been evidence of presidential complicity. He ordered the cover-up, six days after the burglary. He withheld the evidence, even from his lawyer, betraying his supporters in Congress. He resigned, Aug. 8, 1974.

County line

Bensinger seeks views

by AL MESSERSCHMIDT
Metropolitan Affairs Editor

Lawbreakers, drug users and forest preserve gangs; the issue is law enforcement. What kind, how much and where? And, area residents are missing an unusual chance to pick or praise the quality of enforcement service financed by Northwest suburban tax dollars.

Peter Bensinger, GOP candidate for sheriff, has started a series of what he calls "public hearings" to examine citizen attitudes about law enforcement in Cook County.

Wednesday's hearing at Harper College drew six panel members, three Bensinger staffers, two reporters, a photographer and eight unidentified audience members. Four persons — State Rep. Richard Mugalian, D-Palatine; Hoffman Estates Mayor Virginia Hayter; Paul Richartz of the Prospect Heights Improvement Assn. and Joan Reed of the Schaumburg Twp. Commission on Youth — testified.

A similar hearing in Schiller Park last week — on the night former president Richard Nixon resigned — drew 25 persons.

Bensinger admits that the near-empty rooms are disappointing. The bright side is the "excellent quality" of testimony, he says, looking forward to a final hearing in the Northwest suburbs that is scheduled Aug. 27 in Des Plaines.

Bensinger is after the only county job the GOP has managed to hold with regularity in the last decade. The series of hearings, at the point of Bensinger's candidacy, becomes political.

But missing from the hearings are the normal political hoopla . . . the posters . . . the banners . . . the brochures and leaflets . . . and the pressure to sign up, to volunteer, to contribute.

Bensinger's brown campaign station wagon — with its huge white "Bensinger for sheriff" letters — remains outside and the attitude of the panel inside is strictly to "listen to what people have to say."

Complaints and concepts garnered during the hearings will be used in determining campaign positions.

Bensinger has learned in this campaign that few people know or understand the sheriff's $32 million-a-year operation.

For that reason and "because we made a conscious decision to spend some money in August" Bensinger the candidate started this week a series of 30-second television commercials. Money is tight, Bensinger says, but, at a cost as high as $1,000 per spot, the early exposure during Wide World of Sports or after the late movie is worth it.

From the hearings, the other appearances including discussion Tuesday night with the Prospect Heights Homeowners Assn., Bensinger is finding four complaints about sheriff-oriented services:

- Need for increased patrols in unincorporated areas. Response time for patrol cars can top 90 minutes and "we're left high and dry wondering who to call," Richartz said.
- Disruptions in forest preserves. Bensinger has called for take-over of preserve patrols by the sheriff.
- Drug abuse and education. "The juvenile program of the sheriff is appallingly understaffed," Williams said. Bensinger added that the sheriff employs only six juvenile officers for the unincorporated area while school districts, like Evanston, employ one officer per school. Crime and break-ins and "the younger group" are connected, Mayor Hayter said.
- Lack of local services. No divorce, family or children's courts in convenient suburbs. Mrs. Reed suggested court-sheriff facilities in four-township areas. Bensinger says he favors local availability, not centralization.

Peter Bensinger

Bensinger says he will pinpoint waste in the sheriff's budget that would finance changes to remedy citizens complaints:

"You don't hear a lot of people saying it's wonderful to have all those bailiffs. The sheriff has a minimum allocation for patrols . . . yet the staff includes 173 janitors, window washers and elevator operators."

Bensinger's hearings are the effort of an ambitious candidate to find out what's happening without the constraints of normal campaigning. Local tax-complaining citizens and other public officials apparently are not ambitious enough to take part in the process. And, it's rare to find already elected county officials willing to abandon speech-making and to pick up on the same listening format.

Age discrimination hit

Recently we were shopping in Woodfield and we stopped by a certain restaurant to get something to eat. We were absolutely appalled by the condition of the restaurant.

The people working there didn't wear hats or hairnets, the tables were filthy and the walls and floor had food stuck on them.

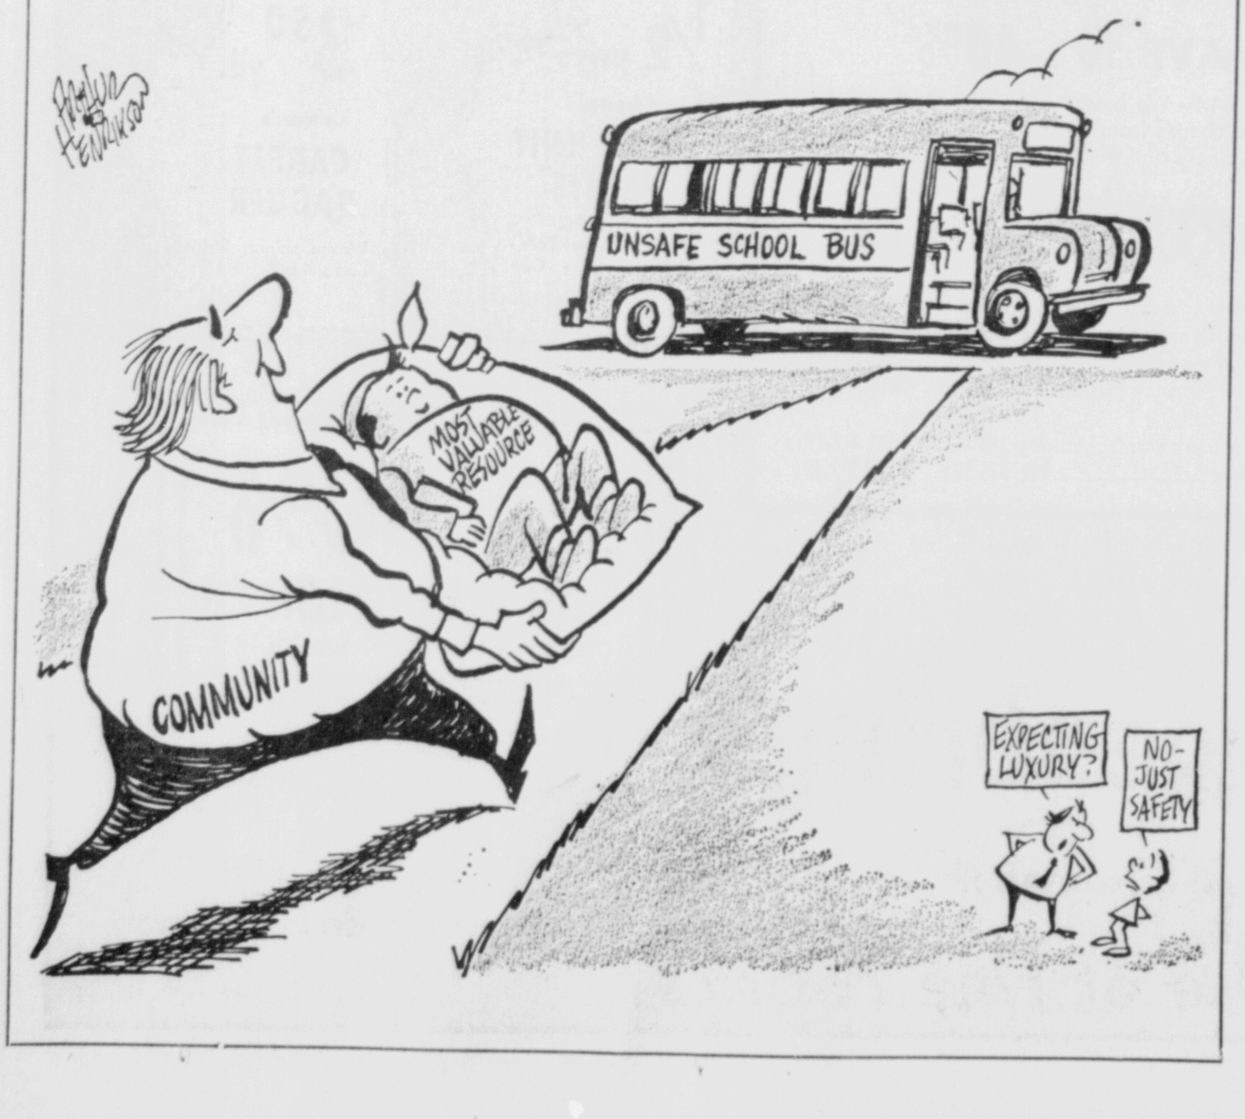

This restaurant seemed totally unsuitable to serve the public and we wanted to do something about it.

The first thing we did was to call the Better Business Bureau, complaint department. We called and the woman answering the phone said we could not issue a complaint since we are only 16 years old. We then asked her why and she said, "That's our policy," and hung up. Being furious we called back pretending to be adults. The very same woman treated us very courteously and sent us a complaint form to fill out against the restaurant.

What our question is, if a couple of interested young people cannot file a valid complaint to the Better Business Bureau, where do we go? If the Better Business Bureau was formed for hopes of bettering businesses, why don't they start by improving their own policy?

'Deep appreciation'

We would like to thank the Rolling Meadows paramedics who quickly came to the aid of our son, Mark, after his accident and the Rolling Meadows policemen who were so kind and helpful.

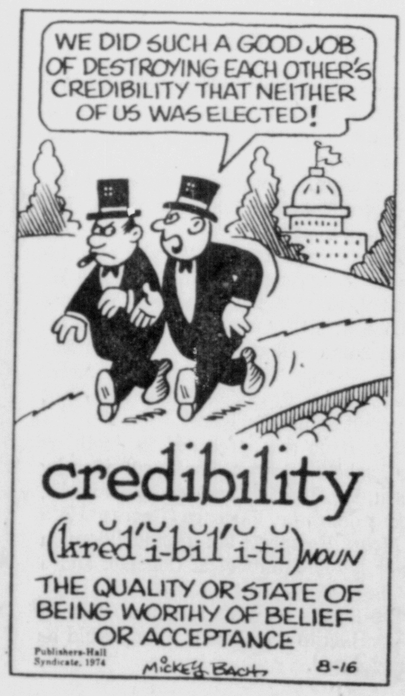

We also wish to commend all the doctors and nurses at Northwest Community Hospital who strived so hard to save our son's life.

We also wish to show our deep appreciation to our friends and neighbors for their kindness and sympathy in our time of grief.

May God bless you all.

Running the lottery is his game

Batch: the man who turns half a buck into $1 million

by BARRY SIGALE

Much has been made of the fact that the signature of Ralph Batch appears in the middle left corner of each and every lottery ticket sold. But it is his actions as the new game's superintendent that eventually will make him famous and endear him to the thousands of Illinoisans who win cash prizes.

For Batch, helping to make winners of hopeful 50-cent ticket buyers is nothing new. He is credited with having a hand in making millionaires of 32 New Jerseyites during his tenure as lottery superintendent in that state.

And, as Gov. Daniel Walker gave the first $300,000 check to a lucky Bonanza qualifier at a special drawing in Springfield Thursday, Batch began his Illinois Lottery career with at least 38 new friends.

Prizes went to the 38 participants who matched both their two three-digit numbers with those drawn by Walker and other dignitaries in Springfield last week.

"It was a very exhilarating sensation," said Batch of his role in bestowing riches in his native New Jersey. "It was especially nice because we had good winners. They used the money well."

AMONG BATCH'S recollections was the case of one Frank DeVita, a plumber's assistant who wanted to be a carpenter. He hated every day we went to work," said Batch. But that all changed when DeVita won in the millionaire drawing.

"He never even stopped to shake hands," said Batch, smiling. "Frank went to the telephone, called his boss, told him where his tools were and what he could do with them." DeVita was determined to enjoy his riches, said Batch, even though the state paid him in installments of $50,000 a year instead of in a lump sum.

"Frank really enjoyed himself," said Batch. "He joined spa clubs, went to the best haberdasheries. He would have been ideally cast for 'Guys and Dolls.'

"What's Frank doing now? Nothing. And he doesn't intend to do anything, either. He did buy a Roto-Rooter, though. Finally, his wife had to go to work. She couldn't stand to have him around the house."

THE ILLINOIS STATE LOTTERY

THEN THERE was another winner Batch remembered. "If there ever was any guy who was least capable of administering the affairs of a million-dollar estate it was this guy. We went on a television interview show and this guy answered every question. He wouldn't let me talk. Afterward I asked him how he could be so smart so soon . . . when a week ago he didn't know anyting. He said, "When I was POOR nobody paid any attention to me'."

IT IS STORIES like these that Batch will be recalling a year from now as the state names (every Thursday) $300,000 and $1 million winners monthly. Right now, though, he is supervising a game in its infant stage and has become the center of attention as the main man breathing life into it.

For instance, while the new Illinois Lottery Control Board debates what procedural rules to use or whether to approve payment of a painting bill, the news media scurry for interviews with Batch, who attends all the meetings and gives lottery progress reports. When the meeting breaks up they move in on him, firing questions that try to clear up the confusion about some segments of the game.

Batch worries when he hears that there is some difficulty in understanding how the lottery works and some of the details surrounding payment of winners. "A game called Lotto was in every home for years," he said. "As I was growing up Lotto must have been under every Christmas tree. It's not unlike Bingo. If your numbers match you win."

Batch added that he was pleased with the huge sale of tickets the first week of the game. The 7.25 million tickets sold represents a record for a first week of any similar lottery in the nation.

THE $27,000-A-YEAR Lottery superintendent earned a law degree from Georgetown University, is a former FBI agent, was a private business executive and served as mayor of Millburn, N.J., a community of 20,000 and the third wealthiest town in the nation, Batch said.

He served as executive director of the New Jersey Lottery before coming to Illinois. But he almost didn't accept the job. "I decided to retire when I left the New Jersey Lottery, said the 62-year-old Batch. "But I guess I got me out of the New Jersey Lottery but couldn't get the lottery out of me."

And as the countdown ends for each week's drawing Batch will be in the middle of the check-presentation ceremonies. He's sure he'll get a big response from the super winner.

"I haven't had anybody refuse the money yet."

Midwest Bonsai Show today through Sun.

The 16th Annual Midwest Bonsai Show is being held today through Sunday at D. Hill's Nursery in Dundee.

A bonsai plant is a tree or shrub kept small by pruning, grown in a small container and trained to suggest an aged tree.

Several bonsai experts will be on hand Friday when they will present merit awards to visitors for their efforts in the art of bonsai.

Continuous lectures by Chase Rosade, the Japan-trained and nationally known Bonsai expert, will run all three days of the show.

Hill's Nursery will show its private collection of bonsai, including "Hill's Patriarch," the oldest known Midwestern bonsai, a Japanese Juniper brought from Japan by Arthur Hill in 1902.

On Saturday at 3 p.m. all kinds of plants, both evergreen and deciduous types, will be auctioned off.

Dundee is located just north of the Ill. Rte. 31 exit on the Northwest Tollway.

House votes to eliminate development of nerve gas

From Roll Call Report

Following is a summary of key votes cast by members of the Illinois congressional delegation during the period from Aug. 1 - 7.

Included in the summary are votes by Illinois' two senators, Republican Charles H. Percy and Democrat Adlai E. Stevenson III, and Northwest suburban congressmen U.S. Rep. Philip M. Crane, R-12th, and U.S Rep. Samuel H. Young, R-10th.

House

NERVE GAS: An amendment that eliminated a $5.8 million Pentagon request for development of binary nerve gas, adopted 214-186. The amendment was attached to the fiscal 1975 defense appropriations bill, later passed and sent to the Senate.

Unlike present forms of nerve gas, binary gas does not become lethal until its chemicals are mixed upon firing of the projectile. It is thus safer for domestic handling.

Supporters argued that the U.S., with up to 50 million pounds of gas now stockpiled, has ample supplies. They also opposed development of new gas while the government takes part in ongoing Geneva disarmament talks aimed at a world-wide ban on chemical warfare.

Opponents of the amendment said development of binary gas should proceed immediately because it is less dangerous than existing gases. They also urged spending the $5.8 million in order to keep pace with the Soviet Union's gas weaponry.

Young ..... Yes
Crane ..... No

Others: Ralph Metcalfe, D-1st; Cardiss Collins, D-7th; Sidney Yates, D-9th; Frank Annunzio, D-11th; Robert McClory, R-13th; John Erlenborn, R-14th; John Anderson, R-16th; Thomas Railsback, R-19th; Paul Findley, R-20th, and George Shipley, D-22nd, voted yes.

Morgan Murphy, D-2nd; Robert Hanrahan, R-3rd; Edward Derwinski, R-4th; John Kluczynski, D-5th; Harold Collier, R-6th; Dan Rostenkowski, D-8th; Leslie Arends, R-15th; George O'Brien, R-17th; Robert Michel, R-18th; Edward Madigan, R-21st, and Melvin Price, D-23rd, voted no.

Kenneth Gray, D-24th, did not vote.

DEFENSE SPENDING: An attempt to cut $2.2 billion across-the-board from the $83.4 billion fiscal 1975 defense appropriations bill, rejected 216-178.

The amendment would have set an $81.2 billion ceiling, leaving the Pentagon rather than Congress with responsibility to eliminate the $2.2 billion.

Supporters and oponents reflected the traditional "priorities" disagreement over domestic needs vs. the need for a strong defense.

Many supporters of the reduction also cited the need to curtail federal spending in the face of inflation.

Opponents said the defense bill already had been substantially trimmed, and argued against the principle of an across-the-board rather than itemized reduction.

Crane ..... No
Young ..... No

Metcalfe, Murphy, Hanrahan, Collins, Rostenkowski, Yates, Annunzio, Findley, and Shipley voted yes.

Kluczysnki, Collier, McClory, Erlenborn, Arends, Anderson; O'Brien, Madigan, Michel, Railsback and Price voted No.

Derwinski and Gray did not vote.

CAMPAIGN SPENDING: An amendment to limit to $42,500 the amount a candidate for the House could spend in each primary and general election campaign, rejected 223-187. It was offered to a bill reforming the way congressional campaigns are financed.

The vote left intact a proposed $75,000 ceiling plus an allotment of $18,750 for fund-raising expenses — a total ceiling of $93,750.

Young

Stevenson

Supporters of a $42,500 ceiling argued that, as a Watergate lesson, private money in campaigns should be minimized.

Opponents argued that any spending ceiling should be high enough to give challengers opportunity to overtake better-known incumbents.

Young ..... No

Murphy, Hanrahan, McClory, Madigan and Shipley voted Yes.

Metcalfe, Derwinski, Kluczynski, Collier, Collins, Rostenkowski, Yates, Annunzio, Erlenborn, Arends, Anderson, O'Brien, Michel, Railsback, Findley and Price voted no.

Gray did not vote.

Senate

HERBICIDE CONTROVERSY: An amendment banning use of a controversial herbicide, named "2,4,5-..T," on any lands within the U.S. National Forest system rejected 56-34.

Sen. Gaylord Nelson, D-Wis., sponsor of the amendment, said the Forest Service plans to use the herbicide on 61 forests in 23 states, including Wisconsin, Michigan, Ohio and Indiana.

Nelson said that "2, 4,5-T" was used in the defoliant employed by the U.S. in Vietnam, and cited scientific opinion that it can poison the environment and the food chain.

One opponent of the amendment, Sen. Alan Bible, D-Nev., said that Nelson "may turn out to be right," but objected to the measure on procedural grounds. The issue, Bible said, was raised after hearings had been completed on the Interior Department appropriations bill, to which Nelson sought to attach his amendment.

Percy ..... Yes
Stevenson ..... No

Du Quoin trots into race spotlight

TURF EDITOR

In less than two weeks, the sleeping town of Du Quoin in Southern Illinois will awaken to a population explosion that won't cease until the community's 6,700 residents have increased 50 times!

The magnetic attraction is the Kentucky Derby of harness racing —the Hambletonian, scheduled for Wednesday, Aug. 28 at 1:15 p.m.

Nowhere does one event generate as much attention among millionaires, farmers, grandpappys and little tykes than the Hambo, the world series of the trotting set in a rural, prairie-view community.

They'll come from all over the world to watch the spectacle — a mile race for three-year olds around a clay track that accommodates a mere 18,000 spectators.

The fascinating drawing power of the Hambletonian cannot be attributed to a mind-boggling purse or the promise of a gambler's paradise.

Compared to lucrative thoroughbred standards, the $135,000 purse distribution is nominal when pinned back-to-back with the glamor, prestige and the honor of participating in this majestic, historical race.

The gamblers are plain out of luck.

The Hambletonian has flourished without the crutch of parimutuel wagering, although the betting machines will probably be installed in 1975.

Tradition is steeped around the 18 years that DuQuoin has provided a home for the richest trotting race named for the fabled pacer Hambletonian (1849-1876).

The mile dash will culminate five days of Grand Circuit racing on one of the finest tracks in the country and is all a small part of the gala Du Quoin State Fair that runs from Aug. 24 through Sept. 2.

The trotter that graces the winner's circle will join the esteemed company of such notables as Super Bowl (1972), Ayres (1964) or record-setting Flirth (1973).

This year's list of nominations isn't all that lean or non-representative. And having selected two straight Kentucky Derby champions (Secretariat and Cannonade), I can't help but give some early insight into the race.

My choice in the classic is Nevele Diamond, owned and trained by the incomparable Stanley Dancer. The Nevele Pride — Kimberly Rodney colt has won four races and finished second three times in eight starts.

Dancer has been bringing the colt around slowly, racing him with more time than normal between starts. Nevele Diamond most recently captured the Arden Downs at The Meadows.

Bucking Nevele Diamond for honors will be Golden Sovereign who has run out of the money only once while winning six of 11 starts and finishing second on four other occasions.

The gals will be interested in Noble Florie, a bay filly that will carry the most impressive credentials into the race. Whether she can run with the boys remains to be seen, but her nine triumphs and a second in 10 trips are solid proof of her ability.

Other contenders eligible for the Hambo, with their starts, wins, seconds and thirds in parentheses are: Berna Hanover (14-5-7-2), Missle Speed (6-3-1-0, a full brother to 1971 Hambo winner Speedy Crown), Spitfire Hanover (15-6-5-2), Stock Split (13-5--1-3), Anvil (9-2-1-1-), My Super Pride (9-2-1-1), Christopher T (11-2-2-1), Buckeye Count (9-3-1-2), Armbro Ouzo (17-5-1-3), Aragon Hanover (11-2-1-1), Moot Point (7-1-2-0) and Journalist (10-3-3-1).

Don't forget the yearling sale tonight at the Arlington Park Paddock area beginning at 7 p.m. Twenty-two select one-year-olds will go up for auction by the Fasig-Tipton Company in a rare event sponsored by the Illinois Thoroughbred Breeders and Owners Foundation (ITBOF).

The first sale in some eight years in Illinois will be highlighted by the appearance of offspring from such stellar performers as T. V. Lark, Fleet Nasrullah, Bold Commander and Mr. Pow Wow.

The action promises to be fast and furious as a big crop of potential owners are expected to take part in the bidding.

Geared to upgrade the Illinois breeding program, all yearlings on display are bred and/or foaled in this state.

"Our major goal has been to present quality, not quantity," ITBOF president Ed Pfeiler of Barrington assessed. "We sought out only the very best-bred and best-conformed young horses in the state."

The T. V. Lark offspring figure to draw the highest bids. During the Keeneland Yearling Sales in Kentucky last month, two yearlings sired by T. V. Lark brought a total of $170,000 within a span of 36 hours. A couple days later, a T.V. Lark colt was sold for a whopping $130,000.

While Arlington Park was running out of the money on its attempts to establish mutuel machines in the North Western Train depot and the sale of Illinois state lottery tickets, it did succeed in obtaining permission to conduct quinella wagering on the second through eighth races every Wednesday.

To win a quinella, a bettor must select the first and second-place horse (in either order). The cost of each quinella ticket is five dollars.

NEVELE DIAMOND rates among the trotters to beat in the upcoming Hambletonian at the DuQuoin State Fair. Stanley Dancer will be in the sulky for the mile race for three year olds.

ONE OF THE MOST expensive transactions to be conducted at the Arlington Park paddock tonight will be this T.V. Lark bay filly consigned by Jim McHugh's Windward Farm. This bay miss is a half sister to the stakes winner Bzz-Bzz, out of the Royal Note mare Call Anytime. The 22-horse yearling sale is scheduled to begin at 7 p.m.

IF THEY COULD only talk. Standing prettily all in a row waiting to be eyed and bought, these pretty maid dolls give no hint that they've been developed from soft drink bottles, plastic foam ball heads and bright, cast-off trims for their clothes.

Medley

Each has her own personality

Pop bottle dolls are a booming business

by GENIE CAMPBELL

Rachel, Charlotte and Melinda can't talk. They don't run or dance.

That's too much to ask of dolls with soft drink bottle bodies and plastic foam heads.

But they do smile a lot, Charlotte even tends to smirk. And to listen to their creators talk, each one, though lifeless, offers a unique personality all her own.

Mary Rooney and Georgette Coffey name each one of their draped dolls and weave backgrounds to match.

Kathryn, a freckled-faced farm girl, keeps company with the fragile-looking Southern belle, and both stand on display beside a hard-nosed street walker. What did you say?

"WE NEVER THOUGHT we'd sell her," said Georgette. "But someone came in and picked her out from all the rest. I guess no two people look at them the same."

A relatively new item to hit the ballooning craft market, the Arlington Heights neighbors began making the dolls last spring after Mary's sister from the West Coast paid a visit and showed them how.

The first models were small and skinny and not very pretty in the face.

Pathetic Pearl, appropriately labeled by Mary, never did get any hands. She was an experimental flop.

Their expertise developed through trial and error, Mary and Georgette finally turned out several dolls which surpassed even their original expectations. They gave them to their daughters. Each has two girls (Mary also has five sons).

Friends who saw the dolls prominently displayed in the kids' bedrooms begged the two women to make more. Before long Mary and Georgette began an assembly line operation to keep up with the demand.

AND BUSINESS IS still booming. Sixty dolls have been made and sold since poor Pathetic Pearl. Orders are now being accepted for Christmas delivery.

"It's still fun because each one comes out just a little bit different," said Mary.

"People will come in and ask us to make one just like that one," said Georgette pointing to one of the samples. "We have to tell them we're sorry, but we can't possibly do it. We can try, but they never turn out exactly the same. Each has a personality all her own."

THAT'S WHY THE two women hate to part with any of their dolls. Mary and Georgette occasionally playfully bicker over one they both think is particularly cute. The mild-mannered argument is always abruptly settled when the next customer picks out the favored one.

However, before each doll leaves for its new home, a picture is taken for the family album.

Eleven different materials go into each doll. Using a pop bottle as a base, a plastic foam ball for the head is dipped in draping solution and painted with a base coat before being anchored onto the neck of the bottle. Paper toweling stuffed underneath the skirt gives it fullness. Draping solution makes it stiff.

Sausage curls are rolled out of mohair. Mary and Georgette turn out blondes, brunettes and red heads with either big brown or blue eyes. Some people prefer specific combinations. Others will just choose the doll that most appeals to them.

IT TAKES ABOUT eight hours altogether to turn out one doll. The two friends work together when they can, or alone at home when they find some extra time.

Mary's husband studies a lot at night.

"He's grateful that I have something to do and don't bother him," she laughed.

Mary waits until her brood of seven are all in bed. Sometimes she's up to 1 or 2 in the morning painting on faces.

The dolls add "a little cheer and color, which explains their popularity," both women agree.

"We are most successful with grandmothers who don't have to be practical. They are happy to find something unique for a little girl who might have everything."

But the dolls are not all going to little girls.

"My brother is buying one to give to his girlfriend," added Georgette.

THOUGH MUCH OF the profit goes right back into materials, there is some left over to be "divided up." Once Mary and Georgette even took their husbands to dinner and picked up the tab . . . or the dolls did.

"I have a little pouch in which I hide my money," said Georgette, who is saving to buy herself a pair of contact lenses.

And what about Mary?

"I use mine for milk and bread." With seven children and present food prices, it's easy to see why.

WHEN HOUSEKEEPING chores are completed and the kids are outside playing, Arlington Heights neighbors Georgette Coffey and Mary Rooney meet at one house to work on their hand-crafted draped dolls. Never dreaming it would turn into a real business, the two friends find it difficult keeping up with orders.

'That's Entertainment'

Will it bring back musicals?

by DICK KLEINER

"That's Entertainment," the big MGM rehash of its great film musicals, is doing so well at the box office that it may bring back musicals.

It was written, produced and directed by Jack Haley Jr., the son of the great film comic known, among other fine characterizations, for his role as The Tin Man in "The Wizard of Oz." He has come into his own with the film. For years, he was known as a fine hand with a documentary. Now, with "That's Entertainment," Haley is recognized as a major new creative force in the industry.

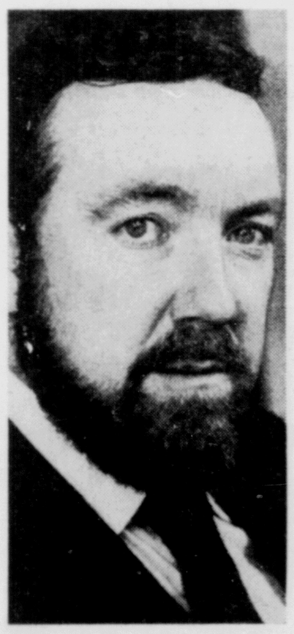

"It's rekindled interest in musicals already," he says. "I know of several studios that have plans for musicals under way. It seems to appeal to a wide audience — from teen-agers to people in their 80s."

HIS PLANS ARE, next, to do a TV documentary about the late Samuel Goldwyn and his films. Then he hopes to go back to making movies, although there is some pressure from MGM for him to do a sequel to "That's Entertainment."

"There's enough material left," he says, "for me to do 10 more."

To put the first one together took a lot of work and a lot to time — and a lot of hot dogs.

His M.O. was to invite friends over to his house every Friday and Saturday night. He'd screen a double-feature of MGM musicals both nights, serving chile and hot dogs. He saw some 200 films. And his friends ate how much of this fare without rebelling? But that's another Hollywood legend in the making.

MANY FILMS HE had to see over and over again, as he searched for a particular scene he knew was in one of them somewhere.

Then he had to get the narrators — Fred Astaire, Bing Crosby, Gene Kelly, Peter Lawford, Liza Minnelli, Donald O'Connor, Debbie Reynolds, Mickey Rooney, Frank Sinatra, James Stewart and Elizabeth Taylor — and film their intros and commentaries. It wasn't easy.

Liz Taylor was the toughest to pin down, but he finally nailed her in Rome. Then, Haley says, her then husband, Richard Burton, got in the way, wondering how much she was going to be paid.

"I narrated a 15-second spot," Burton said, just when things were about to be finalized, "and got $60,000. How much will you pay Elizabeth?"

HALEY SAID, WITH an apologetic smile, that he was prepared to pay about $150, the rate for a day player. He says he had to talk fast and persuasively to get Burton, "who was in one of his protective moods," to let Liz do it.

"That's Entertainment" grew out of a documentary he did for his old friend and ex-bachelor-around-town buddy, David Wolper. It was called "Hollywood and the Stars" and was a series about the old Hollywood. One episode was about musicals.

At that time, they were refused access to MGM's musicals. Later, when he went to work for MGM in the documentary department, he remembered that refusal. He began working on it from the inside. It took two years — and it was worth every moment, and every hot dog, to him.

Limit subject good idea for autograph collectors

with Grace Carolyn

It seems to me the fad for collecting autographs has faded somewhat, for it is hard to find a hero nowadays, but when I was young, in the '30s, in Chicago, I remember my father taking me to big league games and having the players sign his baseball. Then later, when I started attending plays or concerts downtown, we always hung around afterward hoping to glimpse the stars and to get their names in our autograph books.

Obtaining a signature from a living person is no great problem, of course. One may write to the performer's agent, or simply attend a function where the person appears and be a little pushy. But some collectors want signatures of historical figures, who have long been dust but whose feet have not turned to clay.

The ultimate among political autograph collecting has to be all the signers of the Declaration of Independence. Samuel Johnson once said, "We grow to five feet pretty easily, but not many grow from five to seven." He was implying that the closer one comes to a goal, the harder it becomes. So it is with the signers of the Declaration. One may find two-thirds of them without much difficulty, except for the price. Retail autograph merchants offer them regularly. But many of the signers didn't write much and their names are practically unavailable, such as Gwinett and Lynch.

WHEN SETTING OUT to collect autographs, you should first decide on the subject and to limit it: baseball stars, governors, movie greats, etc. The subject may be limited even further: One of my trade papers carried an article by William Rodger, who suggests collecting every baseball pitcher who has won over 30 games in a season. Some of these are still living. Or, he suggests, actors who have played Hamlet, the governors of Wisconsin, members of the 1927 New York Yankees, heavyweight boxing champs, New York City mayors, Nobel Peace Prize winners, moon visitors — the possibilities are endless.

The Civil War presents all sorts of categories, as well as ensuing wars. Right now, says Mr. Rodgers, there is a vogue for the autographs of German military officers who served under Hitler.

Presidential autographs remain popular. There are really no impossible ones to obtain, for Presidents have all had to write. The most expensive are the early ones, of course: Washington, Adams, Jefferson and Lincoln. The only problem is William Henry Harrison, who only served one month.

One may collect clipped signatures (the least expensive), documents signed, autographed photos (the most interesting, to my thinking) or some particular signed item, such as the baseball mentioned.

DEALERS TRADE in holographed letters, which is the fancy name for autographs, and some of the rarities may run into the thousands of dollars, but an enterprising person can think of ways of collecting contemporary signatures without charge. As these people fade in their public image, samples of their handwriting may become brighter. Making a collection of autographs could be a good project for a school class and give them exercise in writing — all the states' governors, perhaps, written across a map of their states.

My hobby is collecting signatures on checks — made out to me. Those are the most difficult to obtain.

If you have questions or an interesting collection, please write Grace Carolyn Dahlberg, Suburban Living, Paddock Publications, Box 280, Arlington Heights, Ill. 60006. Please enclose stamped self-addressed envelope.

Suspense novel flounders in a sea of complexities

"THE DOGS OF WAR," BY FREDERICK FORSYTH
Viking, $7.95

As the author of two finely detailed, engrossing suspense novels, Forsyth almost succeeds on his third try. But not quite.

Somewhere toward the middle, the reader becomes smothered in the complexities of the central piece of action — the mounting of a coup d'etat in a small African dictatorship.

This is a shame because the author musters an excellent cast of scoundrels, each etched into life with a carefully prepared dossier, and the story is shaped with engrossing thoroughness.

Sir James Manson, a ruthless English business tycoon, is informed that one of his geologists has discovered a mountain of valuable platinum in Africa. He decides that he must force a takeover of the country to assure exploitation of the find.

Hiring a band of mercenaries is his solution. Everything rolls along nicely as Manson and his underlings busily scheme, bribe and corrupt anyone in their path to riches.

In ironic contrast are the mercenaries, who really care little about money. Their leader, Cat Shannon, is a brave and intelligent killer who loves the intrigues and organizational demands of his job.

Like his fellow professionals, he finds his satisfactions in a way of life that demands the ultimate of a man, yet gives him independence and pride.

The book is at its strongest and most intriguing when examining the skills and motives of the mercenaries. Unfortunately, too much time is wasted on reporting the methods of transhipping a load of ammunition through Europe to Africa.

Joan Hanauer

"BREAKHEART PASS," BY ALISTAIR MacLEAN
Doubleday, $5.95

The expert British suspense writer wanders far afield to the American West of the 1970s and seems to lose some authenticity in the process. But all the elements are here for a rousing adventure tale — a desperate journey through hazardous weather, warring Indians, villains after gold, upstanding, resourceful heroes capable of coping with a cascade of emergencies.

"HELP, I AM BEING HELD PRISONER," BY DONALD E. WESTLAKE
Evans, $6.95

Westlake, whose genius for making crimes and criminals funny resulted in the heralded laughmaker, "The Hot Rock," is back among the lawbreakers again. His non-hero is an incorrigible practical joker whose peculiar sense of humor lands him in jail. The innocent young man — his only failing is playing jokes on people — suddenly finds himself being forced into a life of crime. Another deft kneeslapper from a clever writer.

PAINTINGS TO be awarded during Des Plaines Art Guild's outdoor art fair Sept. 8 are viewed by Thelma Spain, left, guild president, and Candi Ramsey, vice president. Prizes are the work of recognized Chicago area artists Estelle Fedelle and Christl Hansen, a Mount Prospect resident. The fair will be open from 11 a.m. to 6 p.m. in the Ellinwood Parking Lot in downtown Des Plaines. Des Plaines Historical Society is holding a flea market the same day at 777 Lee St.

Guitar skimpy in new Clapton album

Playback
by Tom Von Malder

"461 Ocean Boulevard" (RSO records) marks the return of guitar master Eric Clapton to the recording studio after a four-year absence. For that reason alone, the album is a welcome addition to my collection.

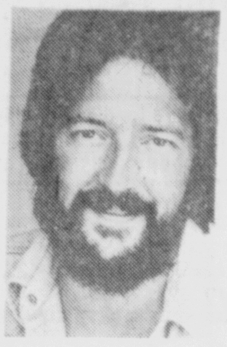

But Clapton cannot rely on his old reputation to make music today. For most of its 40 minutes, the new album lacks the excitement Clapton almost always generated when he played with the Yardbirds, John Mayall's Bluesbreakers, Cream, Blind Faith and Derek and the Dominoes.

Calpton has chosen not to dominate the spotlight in "461" and the album suffers a bit because of it. Only on the opening "Motherless Chiddren" and his own "Let It Grow" does Clapton give his guitar a workout and throw down those guitar lines (such as in the classic "Layla" of four years ago) that you fall in love with right away. On several of the songs, Clapton even abandons the guitar to play dobro and, while good, it's not what the Clapton adorer has in mind to expect.

ON THE plus side, Clapton's singing sounds stronger than it did and there is much more emphasis on rhythm in the songs. In several cuts, this new awareness of rhythm comes through in the choice of the Jamaican raggae beat. The fast-climbing single "I Shot the Sheriff" is particularly appealing in this regard.

Clapton, whose first affection for music was blues, continues the love affair with the slower "Give Me Strength" and "I Can't Hold Out." There's even a bit of country music to "Please Be With Me."

"461" really only whets the appetite.

Eric Clapton

Now that Clapton is back, let's have some sparks from that guitar.

To commemorate (read: cash in) on Clapton's return to both recording and live performances, Polydor records has just reissued Clapton's last studio album, the classic "Layla and Other Assorted Love Songs" which was first issued in 1970 on Atco records. This is a must album for any diehard rock fan's collection. It is one of the finest, most exciting albums in my collection.

Clapton glitters in all the brilliance he was noted for on such classics as "Layla," "Bell Bottom Blues," "Nobody Knows When You're Down and Out" and "Why Does Love Got To Be So Sad." Along for the music are fellow Dominoes Bobby Whitlock, Jim Gordon, Carl Radle and Duane Allman.

A VERY SATISFYING, fun album of go-get-'em rock is Link Wray's "The Link Wray Rumble" (Polydor records).

Wray, who was a hitmaker in the early '60s and then fell into obscurity, has been making a comeback of sorts over the past four years. This time out he has opted for almost straight rock, leaving behind — except for traces — the country and blues music with which he has been involved recently.

The album's second song, "Good Time Joe," would be my odds-on favorite for a classic and deserves to be a No. 1 single. It's sung and played well, has a good beat and an extended ending that permits Wray to dazzle us with his guitar-playing technique. The organ on the song is a perfect lightener too.

Another good song is "She's That Kind of Woman," which is one of several songs in which Wray adopts a hard vocal style that is similar to Mick Jagger's. Similar to the whole Rolling Stones' early style is "Walkin' Bulldog," which is another good rocker (though it lacks the Stones' raunch).

"Rumble" is an instrumental which opens with massive guitar chords and has a savage guitar attack in the middle. It's the song that gets the most praise in the album's liner notes which are writte by one of my favorite guitarists, Peter Townshend of The Who.

NEIL YOUNG'S music has made a healthy recovery in "On the Beach" (Reprise records), his first good album since 1972's "Harvest" album (also Reprise records).

Although the album's lyrics remain a bit too obtuse (and appear to be too studiously obtuse), the music sounds a lot more appealing than the recent disjoined live album and the misconceived "Journey To the Past" soundtrack. "Walk On" and "See the Sky About To Rain" open the album with a loose, relaxing feel. "See the Sky" is probably the album's best song with its lyrics on fate and the warbly, anticipatory feel the Wurlitzer piano gives the song.

Of the electric music, "Revolution Blues" is best for its beat, but the lyrics would make a pretzel envious. Young still suffers from his separation from Crazy Horse which used to back him. The gurgling organ of "Vampire Blues" makes it a bit more appealing than the questionable humor (I hope it's intended as humor).

Three long, rambling narratives make up the second side, with the final "Ambulance Blues" being the most involving for the listener. The song's mood grows as the song progresses and the fiddle and harmonic work in well.

Young used to write relatively simple, almost beautiful love songs. But the emotion of the past seems lost in today's harsher thinking and lines such as this from "Ambulance Blues": "It's easy to get buried in the past, when you try to make a good thing last."

Potluck supper

Des Plaines Theatre Guild is holding a potluck supper in conjunction with its membership meeting next Thursday at the Guild Playhouse, 620 Lee St. in Des Plaines.

For the kick-off meeting of the 1974-75 season, the entertainment will be a sneak preview of DPTG's opening production, "The Most Happy Fella," which is currently in rehearsal for a Sept. 6 opening date.

Paula Unell of Glenview, social chairman, is making arrangements for the supper. Persons wishing to participate should call her at 729-5345.

Barrington Art Fair

The 16th annual Barrington Art Fair sponsored by the Barrington Woman's Club is being held this weekend at Barrington High School, 616 W. Main St.

More than 200 artists have entered the show that is open to the public from 10 a.m. until 5 p.m. both days. Admission is free. Refreshments, balloons and a fun fortune-telling booth will also be available at the fair.

Hecklebirds to perform

Two nine-foot tall multi-colored feathered zanies called The Hecklebirds are entertaining children this weekend at the Woodfield Shopping Center in Schaumburg.

Performances are 4 and 7 p.m. today and 12:30 and 2:30 p.m. tomorrow and Sunday in the Grand Court.

Chicago Sound

The Grand Court of Woodfield Shopping Center in Schaumburg will be filled with songs of the 20's to the 70's at 1 and 3 p.m. this Sunday when 10 singers and dancers perform together as the "Chicago Sound."

Performers include Alice McGivern of Des Plaines in a solo, "Sam, You Made the Pants Too Long."

Arts and crafts fair

The third annual arts and crafts fair is being held at Woodfield Commons, corner of Meacham and Golf Road in Schaumburg this Sunday. Show hours are 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. The fair will be held rain or shine as all exhibitors are under cover of the mall overhang.

Pub Playhouse tryouts

The Pub Playhouse is holding auditions for "Last of the Red Hot Lovers" this Monday at the Mount Prospect Holiday Inn. Producer Al Richman is looking for experienced non-Equity actors for this production that will open the end of September for an eight-week run.

Characters to be cast include Barney Cashman, a 47-year-old "would be" swinger, and his intended partners, two attractive middle-aged women and a kookie starlet in her early twenties. Further information is available through 498-0630.

Symphony tickets on sale

Entr'acte

Season ticket sales for the 1974-75 DuPage Symphony Orchestra season are running ahead of last year, according to Ruth Taylor, chairwoman of the sales campaign.

The orchestra, in its 21st consecutive season under the directorship of Dr. Russell Harvey, will offer works by Verdi, Schubert, Bach, Bernstein and Mozart as well as other composers in the coming year.

One of the orchestra's aims is to foster development of musical talent in area young people and to encourage their seeking of musical careers. Through the annual Young Artists Auditions, the DuPage Symphony has been serving this purpose by selecting young musicians to solo with the orchestra.

THIS IS the time for all area music teachers to review the potentials of their high school pupils in order to direct their study toward auditions to be held in December, announced Mrs. Taylor.

Night out

A bossa nova beat at Fiddlers

by GENIE CAMPBELL

Before they begin their first set of the evening, MANFREDO FEST, pianist and arranger for BATUCADA explains, "The group's name stands for 'beat' in Brazilian . . . though we don't play necessarily only Brazilian music."

Yet a distinguishable bossa nova beat is dominant throughout every selection, firmly implanted from the opening number of "Cast Your Fate to the Wind."

Now at FIDDLERS DOWNSTAIRS LOUNGE Tuesday through Saturday until the end of the month, Batucada is a soft combination of the robust sound associated with Sergio Mendes and a swinging jazz style. Strong percussion and fine, rhythm arrangements set in the Brazilian flavoring.

And ANNA, the female vocalist who resembles a consergatively dressed Cher, shows off with an easy-going style that imparts perfection in tone and quality.

Other members of Batucada are FRANK DAWSON on guitar, ALEJO from Costa Rica on drums and THOMAS KINI, a Polynesian-born bassist.

Decidedly a unique group for Fiddlers, Batucada is more easily listened to, than dance to. But that is only my opinion and, of course, the dance floor is there to be used. But, please, this time save it for the juke box selections in-between sets okay?

The SERENDIPITY SINGERS open in the BLUE MAX of the HYATT REGENCY O'HARE this Monday for two weeks. Originally formed in 1963 at the University of Colorado, the group's first hit was "Don't Let the Rain Come Down." This is their second engagement in the Blue Max.

Following the Serendipity Singers will be singer Frankie Avalon opening Sept. 9. In between, the Blue Max will be closed.

Social satirist GEORGE CARLIN is now at MILL RUN THEATRE through tomorrow night. He will be followed by STEVE LAWRENCE & EYDIE GORME, who open a show together beginning next Wednesday for four nights. Appearing on the same bill will be comedian JACK CARTER.

There are two openings in the ARLINGTON PARK TOWERS next Tuesday. Upstairs in the penthouse restaurant JUNE VALLI and husband-partner JIMMY MERCHANT will be singing through Sept. 7 to complete the hotel's summer salute to the "Nifty Fifties."

Downstairs in the Tack Room, LARRY BRENT and the NEW EXPERIENCE will be featured for an extended run.

Also continuing are the international celebrations up in the Top of the Towers supper club. Next on the agenda is a "Salute to Greece" Thursday, Aug. 29. Otyers scheduled for the near future are France in September and Austria during October.

JACK GORING has received a nomination for best supporting actor frm the Joseph Jefferson Committee for his role in "KIND SIR," now at PHEASANT RUN PLAYHOUSE through Aug. 25. Star of the show is BARBARA BRITTON.

If you missed the FOUR LADS when they appeared recently at Arlington Park Towers, you can still catch their show at Pheasant Run on either Aug. 30 and 31. There will be two shows both nights.

DOM DELUISE'S last words when he left this week for his home in California after finishing a local run in "Luv" were, "I can't believe I'm leaving without Nancy."

Nancy is his black shaggy cock-a-poo that had been appearing with him in the show. The dog disappeared last week from a home in the Winston Park area of Palatine. Dom is heart-broken.

So is his family. Anyone finding the dog (bearing Los Angeles dog license No. 82009) is urged to contact Arlington ParkTheatre. The comedian will handsomely reward you.

Bonsai at Dundee

The annual Midwest Bonsai Show will take place at D. Hill Nursery in Dundee this weekend. Hill's has specialized in growing evergreens for this Oriental art form for years.

The show is free to the public. Special lectures and demonstrations of bonsai and a bonsai auction are features of the three-day affair which starts today. The auction is set for 3 p.m. tomorrow (Saturday).

Art, craft fair at Surrey Ridge

Entries are now being accepted for the "Fall Festival of Arts and Crafts" show at the Surrey Ridge Shopping Center Sept. 28-29. Entry fee is $12 per person. The shopping center is located at the corner of Algonquin and Golf Roads in Arlington Heights.

Cash prizes and ribbons will be awarded in fine art and crafts. Further information concerning entries is available through 394-8751 or 255-4514. Deadline for entering the show is Sept. 12.

There is no rain date since exhibitors will be protected by the overhang on the mall.

London's Old Vic coming to Ravinia Aug. 27-Sept. 1

London's most famous theater, the National Theater of Great Britain (the Old Vic) will perform Shakespeare's "As You Like It" at Ravinia Park Aug. 27-Sept. 1.

The production had its North American premiere last month in San Francisco and will continue on tour before opening on Broadway in December. The Ravinia appearance is the company's only one in this area.

Director Clifford Williams is using an all-male cast, following the custom of Shakespeare's time when male actors played female roles.

Performances are at 8 o'clock evenings and at 2 p.m. Saturday, 3 p.m. Sunday. Tickets are $8 and $6 Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Sunday evenings and $9 and $7 for Friday and Saturday nights. Matinees are $7 and $5.

Tickets may be bought by mail from Ravinia box offices at Box 896, Highland Park, 60035 or 22 W. Monroe, Chicago 60603, or at Sears stores.

Recent award winners at the Brat an' Beer Fest Art Fair held the beginning of this month included Andrew Weiler of Prospect Heights with a first in oils, and Sue Robertson of Wheeling with a first in watercolors. Second in oils went to Lillian Jahnke of Des Plaines; second in watercolors was awarded to Louis Huebner of Park Ridge.

IN MIXED media Charles Speake of Berkley took first place, and Donald Ingwersen of Skokie placed second.

Gary Greenbert of Elgin placed first in sculpture and pottery, and Sylvester Byrne of Glenview took second.

In crafts Jean Wedge of Niles was awarded first prize, and Pat Ketzel of Buffalo Grove placed second.

"Best of show" went to Andrew Weiler of Prospect Heights, and second best was taken by Gary Greenbert.

Purchase awards were handed out to Sue Robertson and Ruth Schalke, both of Wheeling.

Those lucky enough to win a painting at the fair were Mrs. F. Kelly, who took home a watercolor donated by Irving Shipero; Ellie Horcher, who received an acrylic by Christl Hansen; and Scott Lark, who won a watercolor by Sue Robertson. All three reside in Wheeling.

Lambs Farm art festival attracts area exhibitors

A number of area artists will be exhibiting at the two-day arts and crafts festival at Lambs Farm, Libertyville, the weekend of Aug. 24 and 25.

Among them will be Joy Anderson of Des Plaines, a young artist who just graduated from Southern Methodist University in Dallas with a bachelor of fine arts. She will be showing etchings. Miss Anderson already has won 23 awards for her work.

Joy Anderson

Other Des Plaines residents who will be exhibiting at the Lambs festival are Helen MacDonald Larsen, carved and decorated eggs; Maninda Stedman, wood fibre flowers and miniature ceramics and plaques; and Maxine Salfisberg, three-dimensional constructions.

Kokila D. Shah, Elk Grove Village, will show costume jewelry and hand-embroidered items.

BARBARA A. SHARP, Buffalo Grove, will have pastels and pen and ink drawings in the show while W. E. Teske, Arlington Heights, will display his repousse (antiqued copper).

Two Prospect Heights artists are participating in the festival, Karen Hinton with hand-formed sculptures adhered to wood, and Kent Burgess with metal sculpture.

Hoffman Estates will be represented by Jennifer Swanson, oils; Stephen Charles Plichta, watercolor, oil, charcoal and pencil work; and Robert L. Freeman, mixed media paintings.

Sponsored by the Michael Earl Foundation of Lambs Farm, the festival will run from noon to dusk both days. A percentage of the sales will go to the farm for its work with mentally retarded.

Late afternoon best for spraying roses

by Dorothy Ritz

Dear Dorothy: My daughter has been waiting until the children are asleep and everything has quieted down — usually about 10 p.m. — before she sprays her roses for the Japanese beetle. To me, it seems the worst time, what with the dew and all. I'm right, am I not? —Margaret McCarter

Yes, indeed. One of the top ranking experts in this field says that adding more moisture to leaves at night simply helps fungus growth. The time to spray, he says, is when the bugs are actively eating on the plant — late afternoon is good when the winds tend to be calmer and there is still time for the insecticide to dry. As for the children, no reason they can't come in at the time the spraying is done.

Dear Dorothy: What's the best way to remove stains from a lacquered brass chandelier? I've tried rubbing hard with a soft damp cloth, but there have been no results. —Mary Ward

I'd say offhand that brass polish is indicated. If you have no luck with this, it probably means some of the lacquer has worn off. If this is so, you'll have to have the whole thing cleaned and lacquered over again, and this is best done professionally.

Dear Dorothy: This tip may help Mrs. H.W.B. have softer springerles. I roll them at least one-fourth inch thick or a little thicker. To each four-egg recipe I add one tablespoon of honey. My dough is soft and I never use over four cups of flour. I bake them for five minutes at 350 degrees and then for 10 minutes at 300 degrees — until they are a very light brown. Baking them too long can make them hard. —Mrs. William Smith

Crazy Cutup

Can you slip a 3 inch x 5 inch card over your head and around your neck? You may be surprised to find you can. Here's how:

Fold the card in half the long way. Starting at the folded side, make a cut almost through to the other side. Turn the card and make a similar cut, about one-quarter inch away, from the other side. Continue, alternating the direction you cut until you reach the other side of the card.

Now, cut from point A to point B across the fold. Unfold the card. Gently pull the ends in opposite directions. Now try slipping this big loop over your head!

Gail Parker becomes bride, begins a teaching career

Gail F. Parker of Hoffman Estates is making a lot of changes in her life this summer — becoming a bride and a new teacher, all within a few months.

Since recently graduating from Cornell College, Mount Vernon, Iowa, Gail was married July 20 to Douglas H. Mehlan of Chicago and begins teaching second grade for Dist. 54 in Schaumburg next month.

The bride is the daughter of the Edward G. Parkers, 115 Hillcrest Blvd., and is a gradute of Conant High School.

She became a bride in 8 p.m. candlelight rites in the Church of the Cross United Presbyterian Church, Hoffman Estates. Her husband is the son of the Herbert Mehlans of Chicago.

GAIL MADE HER own wedding gown, styling it with an embroidered organdy bodice and a sheer organdy gathered skirt. Her full-length veil was held by a floral headband, and her bouquet was of stephanotis and ivy surrounding a single white orchid.

Jill Olson of Leland, Ill., was maid of honor and John Erickson, Hazelcrest, Ill., a cousin of the groom, was best man.

Gail's two sisters, Cynthia and Cheryl Parker, came down the aisle along with Jennifer Nielsen, Des Moines, Iowa, as bridesmaids. They were escorted by Roger Erickson, another of the groom's cousins; Robert Smith, Chicago; and David Turnball, Clarence, Iowa, the groomsmen.

ALSO IN THE procession was 5-year-old Jennifer Mehlan, the groom's sister, as flower girl. She wore a lime green dress with a white eyelet pinafore and carried a basket of multicolored flowers.

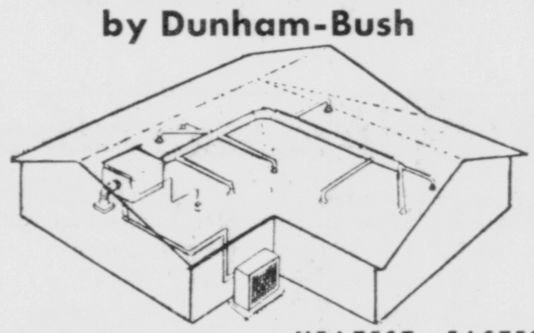

Mrs. Douglas Mehlan

The bride's other attendants wore gowns in a lime green, orange, yellow and white print and carried three white carnations with white daisies.

After the double ring service 150 guests greeted the couple at a champagne reception at Rolling Meadows Holiday Inn. The newlyweds then left for a week in Door County, Wis.

They are living in Arlington Heights, and the groom is studying physical therapy at Chicago Medical School. He is a '72 graduate of Cornell College.

Drop in corn, soybean production

Consumers' food bills to increase?

by LEA TONKIN

Food purchases may claim a bigger chunk of the consumers' weekly food bill in the coming months as the result of the sharp decline in U.S. corn and soybean production forecast this week by the U.S. Dept. of Agriculture.

That's the opinion of Gary Benjamin, agricultural economist at the Federal Reserve Bank in Chicago. He cautions, "It's terribly hard to know exactly what the impact of smaller production will be" at the retail level.

"This particular situation is something we haven't experienced for quite some time," said Benjamin, of the 12 per cent drop in estimated corn production for the year. The USDA figures indicate the corn crop at 4.96 billion bushels, 12 per cent below 1973 figures and a 25 per cent decline from the March estimate. The corn yield forecast also dropped sharply, from 91.4 bushels an acre in 1973 to 77.3 bushels. A 16 per cent drop in soybean production and an 8 per cent boost in wheat production are included in the USDA forecast. The news resulted in immediate boosts in commodity prices for corn and soybeans.

IN SOME TIME, it's possible because of high feed prices that we will see some liquidation of livestock," Benjamin said. "It's going to depress meat prices temporarily." The cutback in livestock breeding stock will eventually mean shorter supply and higher prices, he added.

CATTLE AND hog producers have already experienced steep production cost hikes this year, said Dale Butz of the Illinois Agricultural Assn. He said the cost of feed will have an effect on wholesale and retail prices for pork, beef and poulty and eggs. Seed corn and fertilizer price hikes are among the items which led to the previous increases in feed costs this year, said Butz. Illinois generally ranks as the top state for soybean production and the number two corn producing state.

BENJAMIN SAID consumers will probably experience another boost in poultry and egg prices this year as a result of the feed cost increase. "There are good indications that producers have cut back on their laying flocks and broilers because of high feed costs," he said. Shorter dairy supplies are also forecast by the economist.

"We should see some easing in fruits and vegetable prices, but how much I don't know," Benjamin continued.

What will the price fluctuations at the wholesale level mean for the consumer? Benjamin said, "Contrary to what many people say, consumption patterns are slow to change." As a result, he said, the percentage of spendable income spent on food may rise slightly. The Americans spent 15.8 per cent of their disposable income on food during 1973, an increase from 15.7 per cent in 1972.

Big money 'out of the market'

by DEAN C. MILLER

NEW YORK — Forstmann-Leff Associates of New York, money managers for the super-rich and pension funds, have been 90 to 95 per cent "out of the market" since the Arab oil embargo hit last October. But they see some hopeful signs for the future.

While conceding that Arab militancy has "changed our whole economic life," J. Anthony Forstmann and Joel B. Leff feel the recycling of the millions being sucked into the Middle East will supply some financial grease for Western economies.

Other hopeful signs, they say, are the new technologies coming along to increase productivity, expanding trade with Russia and China and "an inevitable improvement in the national psyche" once the shock of Watergate disappears.

FORSTMANN, 36, who studied at Columbia and Yale, and Leff, 39, who won degrees at Harvard and the Wharton School at the University of Pennsylvania, opened shop in 1967 with $3.5 million under management.

Today, they handle more than $150 million for such blue ribbon names and firms as Pfizer, members of the Ford family, Hold Cross, the Assn. of American Advertisers and Doyle Dane Bernbach Advertising.

During the last five years, 1969-73, Forstmann-Leff has shown an average compounded yearly gain of 22 per cent in investment partnerships. For the same period the Standard and Poor's 500 index had an annual gain of 4.2 per cent and the Dow Jones, 3.6.

"We presently are breaking even," Forstmann said. "But even that's a plus considering the losses some are taking. We're about 5-10 per cent in the market, mostly oil and some IBM picked up when it hit 200. The rest is in short-term obligations. That's where we'll sit until we have clearer market visiblity."

DOES THE FIRM see a recession or depression in the wings? "Let's put it this way," Leff said. "The great depression of 1929 was an explosion. Today, we're walking through a financial minefield."

Both men place great investment value on major economic, political and sociological changes.

On Oct. 28, when the Arab oil embargo hit, they sold out their market holdings.

"We reasoned this way," Forstman said. "We were then, in effect, a blackmailed country. While nobody can predict the future, we did know that blackmail is not conducive to good P-E multiples."

"We just don't believe there is a sacrosanct area of investment," Leff said. "There are areas which at specific times for specific reasons provide investment opportunities. We try to find them. We have, at all times, a high anxiety level because we get paid to be right."

THEY CHARGE a minimum fee of 1 per cent annually, calculated quarterly, on average assets under advisement.

Both partners believe investors will have to show faster footwork in the 1970s because they shape up as years in which the economic environment will become more and more managed. There will be times, they say, when the smart investor will be "totally out" of the equity market. They pointed out that such government policies as tight money and wage and price controls squeeze corporate profits. In such times, says Forstmann, the market can be an investor's minefield.

Asked if his firm handles Ford money because he recently married Charlotte Ford, Forstmann said, "Hardly. They're the last people in the world to trust their money to anyone who doesn't perform."

Energy commission wants to change gas-pump rules

The Federal Energy Administration Monday proposed to amend its price and octane posting regulations to make compliance easier for retailers of gasoline and diesel fuel.

FEA regulations adopted in January had required retailers to post maximum lawful product prices and octane ratings on pumps.

The proposed amendment has three important features: First, the use of a sticker form originally issued by the Cost of Living Council would no longer be required. Second, a minimum size for posted prices and octane ratings would be one-half inch in height, approximately the same size as could be displayed when using the CLC forms. Third, the new rule would specify that compliance with anticipated Federal Trade Commission guidelines for octane postings would be an acceptable alternative to the FEA octane posting rule.

This proposed amendment is particularly important as new grades of unleaded gasoline are sold in accordance with recent Environmental Protection Agency regulation, Federal Energy Administrator John C. Sawhill said.

Sawhill emphasized that the consumer's ability to know the octane quality of gasoline and the lawful prices of gasoline and diesel fuel should be maintained. FEA requests that written comments on the amendment be sent before Aug. 20 to:

Executive Secretariat, Federal Energy Administration, Box AQ, Washington, D.C. 20461.

Richardson Co. declares dividend

The board of directors of The Richardson Co., declared a quarterly dividend of 20 cents a common share, payable to stockholders of record Aug. 30. The board also declared a dividend of $1 a share on preferred stock (Series A, B, C, D and E), payable Nov. 1 to stockholders of record Oct. 4.

Headquartered in Des Plaines, The Richardson Co. is a diversified firm with interests in specialty chemicals, engineered industrial materials and parts, and graphic arts materials.

Humble works... big accomplishments

Religion today

by Rev. Lester Kinsolving

In England she has been described poignantly as "something beautiful for God."

And this summer when she visited the U.S., a widely disillusioned nation appeared briefly sanctified by the visit of Mother Teresa, founder of the Missionaries of Charity.

Her devoted ministry to the dying in the horrifying slums of Calcutta has awed — and endeared — the world. One admirer sent her a check for $500,000, stipulating that it cannot be touched now, but must be used for security for the sisters. Mother Teresa returned the check, with thanks and the observation that God will provide and they must not be overly concerned for the future.

"Don't drift from humble works," she advised the recently founded Co-Workers of Mother Teresa, "Many people would like to do big things; few are willing to do small things."

THIS OBSERVATION is especially perceptive in view of the fact that the few people like Mother Teresa can make the rest of us suffer by comparison, almost to the point of guilt.

Yet this is the antithesis of what is desired by the genuine saint, who realizes that from the example of the founder of Christianity there is a wide variety of needs and opportunities of service. (Jesus spent nearly ten times as much of his life in business — carpentry — as in the preaching ministry). And if all people were either ordained or monastic, who would then manufacture the medicine, food and blankets with which Mother Teresa is able to alleviate so much suffering?

Yet there is a problem in many denominations who do not lay claim on almost all of one's social life (like Mormons and Jehovah's Witnesses). All too often when a person has had a moving conversion experience and wants desperately to serve God, his ardor is absolutely quenched by such an offer as: "Fine! We can use you as an usher, or during the every member canvass."

WHILE BOTH OF these functions can be important, there is a relatively new organization founded within the church which is proving to be wonderfully simple and simply wonderful.

It has no dues, no constitution, no national structure, and no politics. It also has an odd name: FISH, (the Greek word for fish is ichthus, whose letters compile an abbreviation for: Jesus Christ, God's Son, Saviour).

The telephone number for FISH is listed in most city directories — because it has grown, just since 1961, to more than 1,000 chapters, in the U.S., Canada, Africa, Australia and New Zealand.

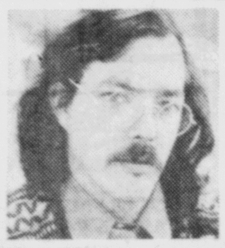

Most of FISH's services are on an emergency basis, such as transportation to hospitals, or baby sitting, or overnight lodging. But there are other invaluable services on a continuing basis, such as keeping contact with elderly persons who live alone, meals for shut-ins, reading to the blind, errands for invalids, food and clothing for disaster victims — and even pet care.

FOUNDED IN Oxfordshire, England, FISH was brought to the U.S. by the Rev. Robert Howell of the Episcopal Church of the Good Shepherd in West Springfield, Mass. — who edits the international FISH newsletter. This priest often had asked himself:

"What action of the Church will give credibility to its words or love for a world which has largely already discounted those words as inconsistent with what it has seen in us?"

What can be seen in the devoted labors of thousands of FISH members, as well as Mother Teresa, is leading justification for organized religion: the miraculous ability, amidst the faults of all human organizations, to produce occasional saints.

Division in Missouri Synod may hurt Lutheran unity

World of religion

by David E. Anderson

The theological divisions in the 2.7 million member Lutheran Church Missouri Synod are spilling over to the denomination's sister Lutheran churches and could pose serious problems for the fragile unity that now exists among American Lutherans.

That spillage became clear at the recent convention of the Lutheran Church in America — the nation's largest 3 million members and most liberal Lutheran communion.

Delegates to the convention adopted a resolution expressing regret at "all official efforts to legislate adherence" to documents other than the Bible which "serve to fence God's word and fracture God's people."

THE RESOLUTION was a direct slap at the present conservative administration of the Missouri Synod, which has pressed for — and received by slim convention votes — a requirement that doctrinal statements approved by conventions are binding on all members of the church.

The conservatives in Missouri, headed by the synod president, Dr. J.A.O. Preus, have used that resolution to press heresy charges against the one-time president of its pretigious Concordia Seminary and several of the seminary staff.

The result has been a wide doctrinal and theological split in the generally conservative denomination with the ouster of a majority of the seminary professors, establishment of a "seminary in exile," a major split in the church's mission staff and, finally, the organization of the moderate minority into "Evangelical Lutherans Mission."

Missouri and the LCA along with the middle-of-the-road American Lutheran Church, form the Lutheran Council in the USA (LCUSA), primary vehicle of inter-Lutheran cooperation and unity in the United States.

PROPONENTS OF Lutheran unity among all three churches have expressed concern about what the impact of the internal Missouri struggle means for the future of Lutheran cooperation, and the action by the LCA convention, clearly siding with the moderates, strengthened that concern.

The movement openly to align the church with the out-of-power moderates came, according to one observer, when it was announced that Preus would not be present for the ceremonial but traditional greeting to the delegates, thus repturing a chain of presidential appearances by heads of "sister churches" reaching back more than a decade.

The delegates, after an abortive plan to disinvite Preus or his substitute, then pushed for an invitation for equal time for a representative of ELIM.

THEY FOLLOWED up that invitation — and appearance by the ELIM's president, the Rev. Samuel J. Roth of St. Louis — with passage of a resolution called "a statement of concern" in which the delegates expressed solidarity with "our Lutheran sisters and brothers everywhere who will join in an evangelical testimony that God's word shall not be bound."

Rev. Roth, in his statement to the convention, said those involved in ELIM were resisting "with considerable passion what we see as an attempt to bind our consciences with formulations of doctrine, or even exegetical judgments, adopted at huge conventions by a slim majority vote."

The present leadership of Missouri, which openly acknowledges that relations between the two churches "have not always been as one would wish them to be," is not likely to take the LCA action happily.

It could mean an increased withdrawal on the part of Missouri from such structures as LCUSA and a heightened reluctance to participate in inter-Lutheran mission programs until its internal battle between conservatives and moderates is finally resolved.

Japanese video a bowl of sexy schizophrenia

by MARIANNA OHE

TOKYO — Now that summer vacations have started, Japanese parents face the problem of how to get the children to bed before the racy late-night television programs are aired.

Television here is somewhat schizophrenic, with innocent family fare during prime time and an anything-goes attitude after midnight.

Three channels usually feature adults-only late-night fare.

Bare-breasted women dressed as Indians and cowgirls prance around the stage doing square dances. On a typical night recently, one channel featured a kind of erotic ballet performed by a man and woman dressed in brief G-strings.

EARLIER IN THE evening, an innocent young songstress dressed in white knee socks and short dress with little white collar sang about first love.

On one of the most popular late-night shows, guests drink whisky, tell off-color stories and watch excerpts from pornographic films that they later discuss. The talk is interspersed with striptease performances and gambling games.

Another channel showed a film of a man caressing a model attired in a black slip, followed by a discussion about the sexiness of black slips.

On a third channel, a man interviewed a woman in a topless bathing suit held up by suspenders and when the interview was completed everyone called out "show time" and a stripper dressed in silver danced slowly out of her clothes.

THE RISQUE shows usually include one or two well-endowed women used as set decorations and who sit around giggling at the off-color stories, much like the hostesses in Tokyo's bars and night clubs.

These shows are a far cry from dinner-time TV fare.

Early-evening viewers prefer Agnes Chan, an 18-year-old student and pop music idol from Hong Kong who dresses to look about 12 and sings in a quavering, childish voice while brushing tears from her cheek with one finger.

Also popular are the "Finger Five," four brothers and a sister ranging in age from 8 to mid-teens who dress alike and sing Japanese rock tunes.

The child cult reaches absurd proportions in the family song contest shows. Here, celebrities bring their entire broods to "compete" with the families of other celebrities. More often than not, the cutest 3-year-old with the highest voice carries his family to victory.

Shelby Lyman on chess

Over the long run the relative value of the pieces holds according to the classical formulations, i.e., pawn-1, bishop and knight-3, rook-5, queen-9. At any particular point in the unfolding of a game, though, few pieces measure up to their potential activity.

Consider that in the initial position there are only 32 empty squares, while the 32 pieces could have total potential control of 242 squares. On the crowded board that prevails most of the time (until the endgame) the pieces rarely get to optimum squares, and even then they usually are blocked.

However, there are times when at least some pieces are fully mobilized. The results can be electrifiying; especially if the opposing king is the target. Then anything goes. The much vaunted numerical ratios can indeed then be thrown out the window. For the mobilized pieces, even if fewer, will run over an inert enemy army.

In some historic positions of the above type, the bishops have played a memorable role. Let's now look at two such famous positions.

(Diagram 1)

In the first diagram, we see the end result of Rubinstein's "immortal game" against Rotlewi (1907). Rotlewi (white) has a queen advantage and is on the move, but devastated by the threat of . . . RxP mate, he resigned. The bishops had done their deadly work.

Bobby Fischer's own immortal demonstration of the bishops climaxed in our second position from a 1964 game. Here Byrne, who is white, resigned, though also on the move and a piece ahead. He is threatendd with 1 . . . BxN; 2. QxB, Q-R6 check followed by mate. If he were to try 1. Q-KB2, then . . . Q-R6 check; 2. K-N1, R-K8 check!!, 3. RxR, BxN followed by mate.

In 1940 Paul Keres had his own memorable try at the two bishops, as shown in diagram three. He has just given his queen for white's rook and bishop. Euwe (white) is facing irresistible force. After 26. K-B1, QR-K1; 27. PB5, R-K4; 28. P-B6, PxP; 29. R-Q2, B-B1; 30. N-B4, R-K6; 31. Q-N1, R-B6 check; 32. K-N2, our final position is reached. Now Keres has a decisive move. He played 32 . . . RxN!

(Diagram 4)

after 33. PxR, R-N1 check; 34. K-B3, B-N5 check, white resigned. (If 35. K-K4, then 35 . . . R-K1 check; 36. K-Q5, B-B6 check forces mate.)

Win at bridge

by Oswald and James Jacoby

West takes bath in heart coup

South didn't have much of a takeout double, but after North cue bid in diamonds and then bid hearts and five spades, South decided that his partner wanted him to go to six if he held a singleton diamond.

When South looked at dummy he wished he hadn't accepted the slam invitation. There appeared to be two losers unless he could drop the queen-jack of clubs with three leads. Then he saw the chance for a squeeze and decided to retain all options.

He ruffed the second diamond, led a trump to dummy, ruffed dummy's last diamond, played two more rounds of trumps while discarding his three of hearts and then led out three rounds of clubs, ruffing the third one in dummy.

East had shown up with three spades and three clubs and surely held at least five diamonds. That meant he could not hold more than two hearts and a squeeze against West was going to work.

South led dummy's last trump; discarded another heart and watched West squirm. West could only hold three cards. One had to be the jack of clubs. He was forced to unguard his queen of hearts and the slam was made.

Every day is Ladies Day in the HERALD. Keep up with society and club doings in "Suburban Living", daily woman's coverage especially designed for the family.

Win a vintage Rolls-Royce at the Grand Opening of First Federal Savings' new branch in Park Ridge.

Announcing First Federal Savings of Chicago's new branch.

It's located at 123 N. Northwest Highway in Park Ridge.

And you're all invited to the Grand Opening festivities starting Tuesday, August 27th through Saturday, September 21st.

For one thing, you might win a vintage Rolls-Royce.

The Rolls is First Prize in First Federal's Billionaire Sweepstakes* and will be on display in front of our new branch.

To enter the Sweepstakes, just stop in and fill out an entry blank.

There'll be five runner-up prizes, too. Five bags filled with silver dollars, worth at least $100 per bag.

And for everyone who comes to our lobby there'll be complimentary gifts.

Free carnations for the ladies.

Free balloons for the kids.

Plus plenty of fresh coffee or tea for all.

Oh yes, don't be surprised if a distinguished looking gentleman in a tuxedo walks up to you and hands you your carnation.

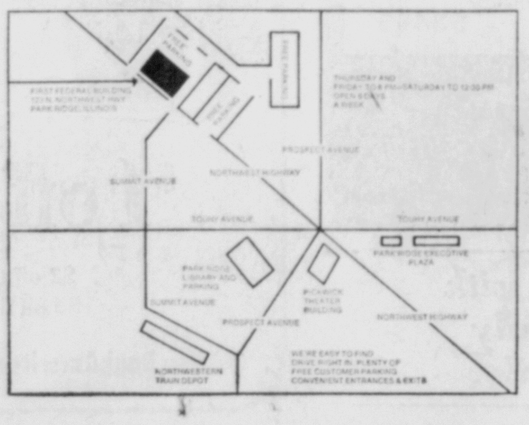

He's Marvin Miller, star of the TV series "The Millionaire." And he'll be making personal appearances in our lobby, at the train station, in shopping centers and all over town on Wednesday, Thursday, Friday and Saturday, August 28-31.

We hope you'll stop by.

You will not only be getting acquainted with the facilities and services of the largest savings and loan in Illinois.

But you just might win yourself a vintage Rolls-Royce to boot.

*Entries must be received no later than September 21, 1974. Drawing will be held at the Park Ridge branch on September 23, 1974. Officers or employees of First Federal Savings and Loan Association of Chicago, their advertising agency or related suppliers or their immediate families are ineligible. Prizes limited to one per person. Winners need not be present. Winners will be notified by mail. All taxes are the winners' responsibility. Odds of winning dependent upon number of entries. Drawing by judges is final.

Palatine Hills golf course features pleasant rolling greenery, including this par three. third hole.

144 golfers to play in 25th meeting

Tourney boasts biggest field

The 25th anniversary is synonymous with silver for a married couple. Guests usually honor them with something made of this precious metal.

Three of the 36 teams competing in the Paddock Publications Inter-League Handicap Golf Tournament will also be honored with trophies of silver and gold at Palatine Hills Golf Course Sunday.

It will take a near perfect marriage, lasting just one day, to win the coveted traveling trophy as well as the first-place pieces of hardware. The four men who try the hardest and come through in the tough situations which will assuredly come up on the demanding 18-hole test will take home the honors and awards late that day.

A record field of 144 will begin play par 72, 6520-yard park district layout, located just off Northwest Highway (Route 14) on the outskirts of Palatine.

Bob Frisk is on vacation. His column will resume upon his return.

Besides the giant traveling trophy, which goes to the sponsor of the winning team, and the handsome individual trophies for the first three teams, other awards will also be presented. The low gross shooter will receive a dozen balls as will the low net golfer.

Every participant will take home a golf towel and custom inscribed bag tag. And all golfers will be given a packet of tees, compliments of the Northern Illinois Gas Co. as well as tourney rules before teeing off.

The first foursomes will go off at 10 a.m. All times and pairings are located on page 4.

During the 24 previous Paddock tourneys, only once did a golfer ever use just one stroke on a hole — Mike Spinello. Although this excellent player won't be on hand this weekend to take another shot at a hole-in-one, Sunday's participants will be.

Spinello's ace made him $100 richer at Barrington's Thunderbird Country Club in 1970. That day he also set the all-time low gross record with a three-under-par 68.

Sunday's 144 players will have four chances over the 18 holes to cash in on the $100 prize. These are the leagues competing along with their respective courses:

Arlington Country Club — Friday Nighters, Ekco Products, Elks Club and DeSoto leagues.

Bartlett Country Club — Roselle League.

Bonnie Dundee Country Club — Chemplex Men's League.

Buffalo Grove Golf Club — Kleinschmidt Co., Honeywell, Inc. and Buffalo Grove Men's leagues.

Glenview Country Club — Moore Business Forms League.

Golden Acres Country Club — Western Electric, City Products and Hoffman Estates Men's leagues.

Hilldale Golf Club — Twinbrook YMCA League.

Indian Lakes Country Club — Arlington Heights Twilight Golf League.

Mount Prospect Country Club — Monday Nighters, Tuesday Nighters, Northwest Suburban YMCA and the Friday Nighters leagues.

Old Orchard Country Club — Warwick Electric, Arlington VFW, Parker Hannifin and the Scratch leagues.

Palatine Hills Golf Club — United Airlines, Union Oil Monday and Tuesday Nighters and American Can Co. leagues.

Thunderbird Country Club — Buehler YMCA, Illinois Bell and T-Bird Twilight leagues.

White Pines-Tioga VFW League.

by ART MUGALIAN

In this day of radical philosophies and even more radical behavior, it isn't surprising that female athletes are finally beginning to assert themselves.

The image of boys and girls running up and down the court together or converging on a pass pattern has a lot of high school coaches and administrators in a cold sweat.

And, perhaps for good reason, since coed contact sports might bring with it the downfall of all sports if carried to its logical conclusion. Not too many people are going to pay to watch girls play boys' football.

But one local coach welcomes the advent of girls athletics. Bill Mohrmann, the track and cross country coach at Forest View High School, sees the rise of girls sports as a means of increasing the overall athletic interest at his school and in his community.

Right away, Mohrmann sets the record straight. "Don't get me wrong — I'm not in favor of girls and boys playing on the same field. I don't want the girls running against the guys. No way."

But Mohrmann recognizes the possibilities for cooperation and mutual help between the boys and girls programs. One of his first projects will be a coed Falcon Invitational Track Meet next May.

"For a few years now, I've been thinking of coordinating the boys and girls track programs in our Falcon Invitational," Mohrmann said. "We were very fortunate last year to have both the boys and girls crowned as the Mid-Suburban Conference champions. As a result of these achievements, I think it might be a good time to publicize track and create more interest among our boy and girl athletes."

"Right now, track competition is something new to the average high school girl athlete," the coach went on. "She is full of enthusiasm, eager to learn, and ready to give an outstanding effort."

"I think the girls can help bring back more dedication in the boy athletes. At the same time the girls had better continue their efforts, because a guy doesn't want to see a poor effort from them. The girls also expect 100 per cent effort. Put them together in a 12-school invitational track meet on a Friday night under the lights and you'll see a thrilling meet. The efforts and performances will be superb because your school is totally represented."

"Next year, we're going to have two separate championships for boys and girls. Maybe the following year we'll combine scores like they do in the Russian-American meets. This combined-team concept could really be a great incentive for the kids because both the boys and girls would be contributing to the overall success of the school in the meet."

Mohrmann emphasizes that he is not encouraging direct boy-girl competition, but he feels his idea for coordinated programs could add new life to high school sports. A successful coed Falcon track meet could make way for girls and boys basketball games on the same night or powder-puff football on the same billing with boys' football.

"That's the idea," said Mohrmann. "You could play the girls basketball game right before the boys game, and just think of the crowds you'd draw. It encourages a whole new group of fans."

Mohrmann is a realist. He knows that girls sports are here to stay. But he won't be satisfied with an uneasy truce.

"I feel that the time has come for school administrators and, in particular, male coaching staffs, to accept this new surge of participation by girls in high school athletics," he said.

"Cooperation will be of absolute necessity because of limited high school facilities. Sports such as swimming, golf, bowling, tennis, track, basketball, and softball are just beginning to get organized for inter-school competition. As far as I'm concerned, the real key to success is the correlation of boy-girl athletics. If not handled properly, it could lead to an inter-school athletic program that is poor competitively and more along the lines of an intramural program."

Mohrmann outlined three important factors in a successful cooperative program.

"First of all, whenever coaches plan to organize something, they had better keep in mind the promotion of the sport and the benefits to the participants. They should not look for prestige. High school coaches looking for prestige — for victory at all costs — are really missing the boat. They get wrapped up in themselves and they forget about the young athletes they coach."

"Secondly, there has to be absolute cooperation among all coaches involved. The head coach of the boys and the head coach of the girls should agree to a philosophy of coaching and in turn this must be passed down by the assistant coaches to the athletes. The loyalty factor here is imperative to success — without staff loyalty, you'll have a complete breakdown of discipline."

"The third point deals with practice schedules. I am not in favor of boys and girls practicing together at the same time on the same facility. There could be too much competition between the sexes. Not only that, a male coach or a female coach just doesn't treat the opposite sex the same way when it comes to training."

"At the same time, the male and female coaching staffs should have periodic meetings mainly to discuss techniques of coaching since most of us are specialists."

The Falcon coach is no fair weather fan when it comes to girls sports. Last year, he offered to assume the reins of the girls track program at Forest View, and although he didn't take the job, Mohrmann admits that he would like to work with girls.

Mohrmann knows that girls' athletics is something more than just a bother or a pain in the neck. He is willing to seize the initiatve and make girls sports what it deserves to be — a viable program. And, at the same time, it should strengthen all athletics.

Knock on wood—aluminum baseball bat is here to stay

by ART MUGALIAN

It's getting harder and harder for a baseball player to put wood on the ball lately, and if current trends continue, the lumber may be taken out of his hands completely.

Aluminum bats are here to stay.

Only that vast conglomerate known as Organized Baseball — the pro ranks — still outlaws the aluminum bat. And it may be just a matter of time before the rules are changed there.

"They're cheaper in the long run because they don't break," said former Hersey athletic director Dick Kinneman.

"From the economic standpoint in high school baseball aluminum bat is outstanding," said Hoffman Estates coach Gary Kraft. "For about $15 you can get a good aluminum bat."

"Longevity is the major selling point," Forest View A. D. Bill Beckman said. "Right now, that's the way I look at it."

No one denies that economics is the key consideration in the use of metal bats.

"High schools and colleges are feeling the pinch," said Kraft. "The $300 we spend each year on wooden bats could be spent more advantageously."

Kraft said that even before aluminum bats were legal in high school, his players used them in batting practice for economic reasons.

The Hoffman coach pointed out that the scarcity of wood is making it increasingly more difficult to supply all levels of the game.

Beckman related a recent conversation he had with a representative of a major bat manufacturer. "He told me that the major leagues get the number one wood bats," said Beckman. "The high schools are probably catching the third grade bat in order of preference."

So it is only natural that high school, college, and American Legion baseball will encourage the use of the aluminum bat. It is cheaper and it may be better for the game.

Kraft feels that eventually the major leagues will permit the metal bat. "People resist change," he said. "It took the Mid-Suburban League two or three years to approve these bats after they were on the market for a while."

Forest View coach Tom Seidel agrees with Kraft. "They'll probably put the aluminum bat in the minor leagues first," predicted Seidel.

Seidel recognized the problem faced by young players in high school and college who may have virtually no experience with a wooden bat. "Some of these kids may go through high school and college ball using only the metal bat and then they'll get to the pros and they won't be able to use it."

Seidel weighed the pros and cons of the aluminum bat, indicating that some brands warp, others flatten out with use, and still others come apart at the knob.

"When I was up in Alaska (playing semi-pro ball in June) I saw a pitcher get hit by a metal bat that broke in half," said Seidel. He needed something like 20 stitches in his leg."

Seidel still saw many advantages in the aluminum bat. "It's pretty hard to hit a ball with an aluminum bat that feels bad," he said. "You never get that shot on the hands — bees in the bat, they used to call it. You can hit the ball six inches above the hands and still get a hit."

For that reason, among others, Arlington Heights American Legion coach Lloyd Meyer also likes the aluminum models. "You'll get a lot of handle hits with the aluminum bat that you wouldn't get with a wood bat," Meyer said.

"Instead of breaking the bat and hitting to the shortstop, you might as well hit the ball over his head for a hit," Meyer reasoned.

Seidel and Meyer differ on one count, however. Seidel lets his players use wood bats if they prefer, but Meyer won't.

"I don't let my kids use wood bats," the legion coach said. "It's for economy reasons. They can get used to it."

Meyer is convinced that the ball goes farther when hit by an aluminum bat. "I saw a kid hit the ball five hundred feet," said Meyer. "And it wasn't just 500 feet — it was 500 feet in two seconds."

Seidel isn't so sure about that. "At first, yes, people were saying that the ball was travelling off the bat faster," he said. "The kids were saying that maybe for the first 100 feet or so the ball seemed to rocket off the aluminum bat. But I don't think the ball travels any farther."

Kraft sided with Seidel. "I never got a chance to play ball with the aluminum bat," he said, "but I did hit in the cage with one. I felt that I didn't get more power, but the ball seemed to jump off the bat quicker."

Acceptance of aluminum bats in the pro leagues, especially in the majors, will depend on whether certain age-old traditions can be broken. There just may come a time when metal bats are accepted through the weight of their numbers.

But it will be a slow process. "You'll never see Dick Allen swinging an aluminum bat," said one coach. "Too many major leaguers are set in their ways. They've got certain exact specifications for size and weight of their bats and they won't change."

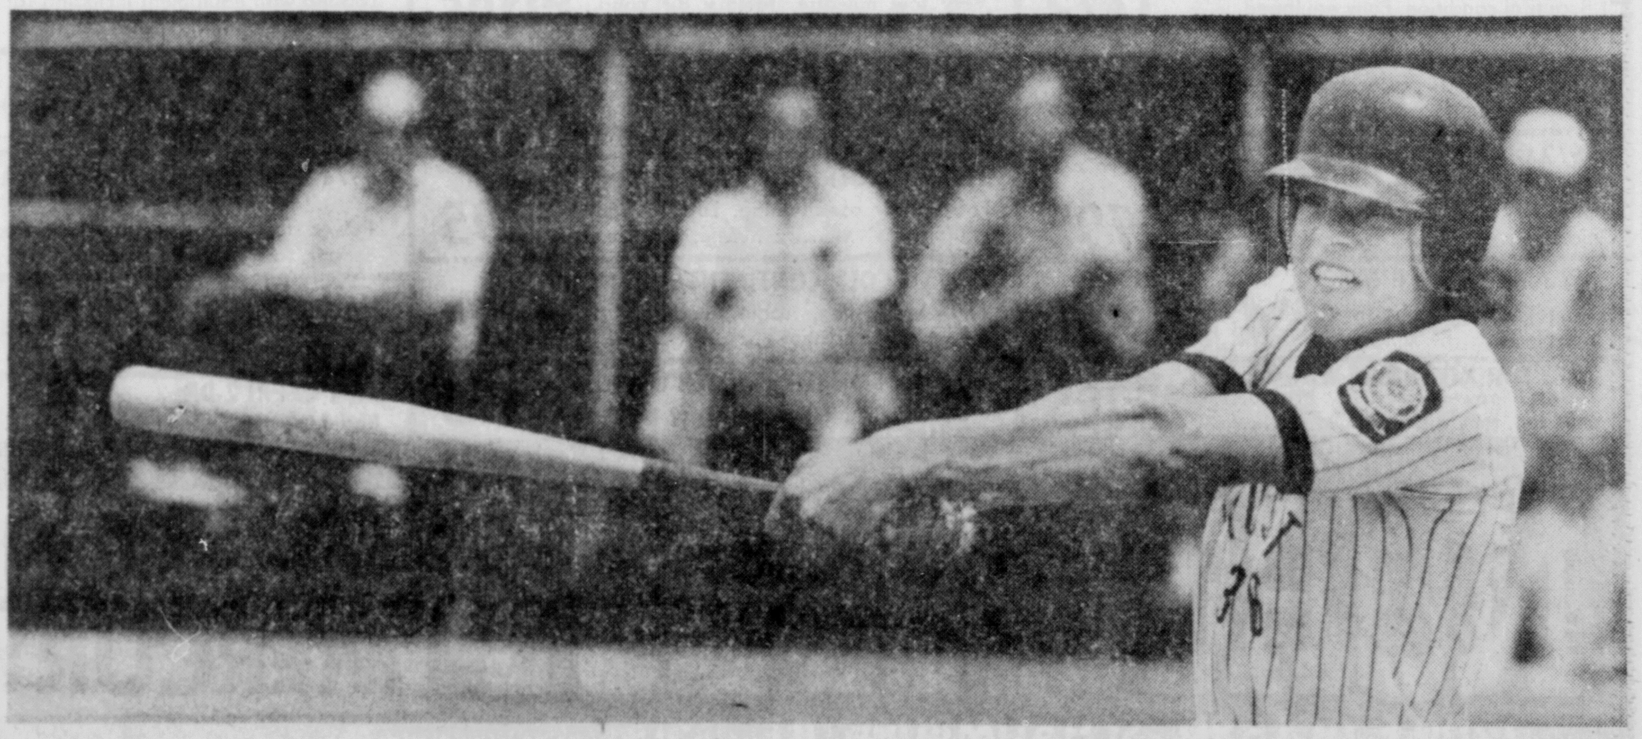

And the resistance to aluminum bats in the majors may come from pitchers. Many hurlers depend on jamming the hitters, forcing weak handle hits that break the bat. A lot of solid handle hits with metal bats would not be in the pitcher's best interest.

But in the next few years will tell the story. Will metal bats drive out the wood?

"In five years you won't see any bats," Kraft predicts.

Will the lively ping of the aluminum replace the crack of the wood?

Time will tell.

George Vukovich swings an aluminum bat and so do all his Arlington Heights American Legion teammates.

HE REMEMBERS MONSTERS

After watching the pitiful exhibition of football Monday night on television (Steelers 50, Bears 21) and recalling the past couple of futile seasons for our once-glorious Bears, I only wish I could somehow be transported into the days when the team actually knew how to play.

Remember the Monsters of the Midway? Remember how all the national magazines featured the Bears? Halas and Luckman and McAfee and Bulldog Turner. Even later when guys like Casares and Gallimore and Harlan Hill and Ed Brown thrilled us with long touchdown runs and passes.

And they may not have been the Monsters anymore and they may not have provided really exciting football every minute on the field, either, but the 1963 team was one of the greatest of all time — especially on defense. And the amazing thing was, it wasn't until two years later that the Bears got Butkus and Sayers. Even though they didn't win anything during the following years, as long as Butkus and Sayers were healthy, the Bears could always draw a crowd.

But now? Nothing. They aren't even worth seeing for free on TV. It's almost a shame.

DID LARRY LOSE?

Dear editor:

I read with interest the article about Larry Monroe pitching for the White Sox in the Hall-of-Fame game on Cooperstown against the Atlanta Braves. It certainly must have been a thrill for him and even though I never saw him pitch for Forest View, I am pulling for Larry to make it big in the majors some day. However, the only thing wrong with the article is that it didn't mention whether Larry got the loss. I assume he did.

Vin Melluney
Arlington Heights

Editor's note: The story went to press before the game was completed. Larry was trailing, 6-3, when he left the game, although that fact wasn't mentioned in the story. The Sox never caught up and they lost, 12-9, so Monroe was tagged with the loss.

GOLF COVERAGE PRAISED

Dear editor:

All of us working at Mount Pleasant appreciate very much the excellent coverage of the Teen-Age Golf Tournament. It was a most successful tournament and, we feel, a real credit to both the community and the Park District. Thank you very much for your consideration. The article which carried a photo of Chick Evans and one of the contestants was especially effective.

WHAT, NO BEARS?

Fans Forum:

Can't help but notice your paper's regular coverage of the Chicago Fire. It really sticks out. Why don't you cover the Cubs and Sox, Bulls and Hawks, and the Aces? With all this news on the minor league Fire, I certainly expect that you will cover the Bears once the real football season starts.

Bud Byers
Arlington Heights

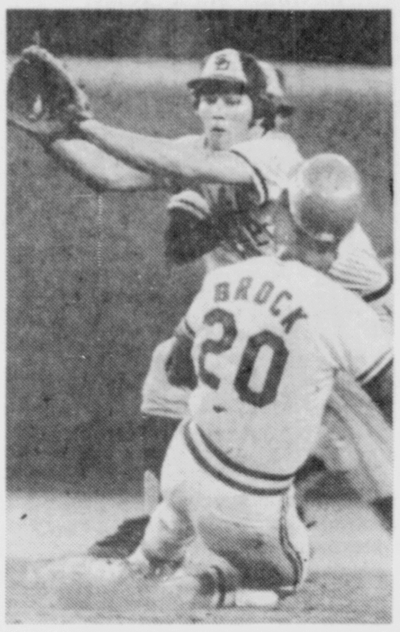

Editor's note: The coverage of the Fire is justified due to the fact that they train in Des Plaines and hold press conferences there. It is possible to send a reporter on a regular basis to drum up stories. The Herald will inaugurate a special weekly feature on the Bears this September that will include some lively Monday morning quarterbacking of Abe Gibron's boys. That is, assuming the season ever gets off the ground.

BROCK STOCK UP

Dear fans forum:

All I can say is — and I've been saying it for 10 years now — the Cubs should have never traded Lou Brock. I know, everybody has said it at least twice already. It's getting to be an injoke. But now Lou just needs 24 stolen bases in 44 games to tie Maury Wills' record for one season. Hitting the ball better than he ever has, I don't see how Lou can miss. And, also, with his "wheels" still working at 35, he has an outside chance of breaking Cobb's lifetime record of 892.

LOU BROCK heads for another stolen base. His thefts this season have prompted one reader to bemoan the fact that he once was a Cub.

What hath sports wrought? Scribes ponder question

by IRA BERKOW

NEW YORK — (NEA) — Whether or not sports is the opium of the people as John R. Tunis says, sports undeniably has played an important part in the history of this country and in the lives of its citizens.

"Sports," Tunis says, "has become an addiction. It has made (people) forget more important things. Politics, for one thing. Look at how 47 million people voted for Nixon, but only 27 million for McGovern.

"Well, that's all you need to say. People should think more. People are more concerned with sports than politics and that's just the reverse of what it should be."

In the recently published book, "No Cheering in the Press Box," Chicago sportswriter Jerry Holtzman recorded and edited a sometime provocative, sometimes touching but always entertaining series of interviews with 18 veteran American sportswriters. John R. Tunis is one of those interviewed.

Several other sportswriters in this fine volume are aware of the impact, perhaps detrimentally, that sports has made on the society. And we have been more arrested with unreality and with dreams than with facts and truth.

"We had an overwhelming innocence in those days (the 1920s)," said Paul Gallico. "We were so naive. Not only we sportswriters but the whole country . . . You could let yourself go on sports . .

Two aces at Arlington

Bud Powell of 945 E. Kenilworth, Palatine, and Mark Woodrich of 4700 Arbor Drive, Arlington Heights, both had a hole-in-one at the Arlington Park Towers golf course.

Both men accomplished this during the week of August 5.

Mr. Powell aced the 16th hole and Mr. Woodrich the 4th. No. 16 is 165 yards and No. 4 is 130 yards.

The manager of the course is Jack Burmaster.

One thing about Sid Gillman, the Houston Oilers' coach, you always know where you stand with him. He doesn't fool around.

Someone came up and told him both sides in the NFL players' strike were going to try a two-week cooling off period, and he immediately air-conditioned his ballclub by cutting seven veterans . . . Sid, when they say cooling off, they don't mean freezing 'em to death . . .

George Scott's blood pressure is perfect and likely to stay that way. Anytime the Milwaukee first baseman has something on his chest, he gets it off.

When the Brewers blew a four-run lead and dropped an 8-5 decision in Kansas City last Saturday for their ninth loss in the last 11 games, Scott marched himself up to Del Crandall's room.

He told the Milwaukee manager he wanted permission to talk to the players, without Crandall or any of the coaches present . . . Permission granted . . . Scott addressed his teammates in the clubhouse at Arlington, Tex., Monday after the Brewers were beaten again by the Royals Sunday.

He began softly and worked himself up nicely as he went along, first with an ordinary every-day shout and then a terrifying roar that split a half dozen eardrums.

"You could hear him through two concrete walls," reports one Brewer player. Whatever Scott said must've made some impression. The Brewers went out and beat the Rangers, 5-1, Monday night and did it again by the same score Tuesday night . . .

Enos "Country" Slaughter, coaching baseball at Duke University now, says expansion has resulted in major league jobs for minor league players today.

"I feel like they got boys in the major leagues who couldn't even play Double-A and Triple-A ball in the '40s," says Slaughter . . .

Bob Feller, never overly impressed by Sandy Koufax' 2,396 strikeouts, isn't too excited either over the fact Bob Gibson recently became the first National Leaguer to strike out 3,000 hitters.

"If I wasn't in the service nearly four years, I'd have struck out more than 3,000," says Feller. He would've, too, the way he was firing the ball when he went off to the Navy in 1942 at the age of 23. As it was, Feller wound up with 2,581 . . .

Now that Joe Mullaney has moved on to the Memphis Sounds in the ABA, Zelmo Beauty may be named player-coach of the Utah Stars. He wants the job, and with the kind of money he's getting, the Stars could be saving themselves some salary by moving him up . . .

Joe DiMaggio, on how it felt having to quit baseball:

"When I walked out the door the last day, I knew I was going to miss it. I had an idea it was going to be an entirely new life for me. I went to the Yankees' office the next day, the day after the final game of the 1951 World Series with the Giants, to tell Dan Topping my plans.

'Dan, I'm here to tell you that game yesterday was my last game. I won't be coming back.' I said to him, 'You've always been fair to me and I thought it was only right that I should tell you before I release it to the newspapers.'

"He asked me to think it over, and I told him my mind was made up. I had almost quit the year before. 'I can't recoup anymore' I said to him. 'I can't get it back the next day.'

"You see, I had viral pneumonia in 1949 and I don't think I was ever the same again after that. Anyway, at the time I told Dan Topping of my decision I was about to go to Japan for six weeks with Lefty O'Doul for a batting exhibition. Dan asked me to think over my decision.

"Well, I don't believe it'll do any good, but I'll hold off,' I told him. That's the way we left it."

When DiMaggio reurned from Japan six weeks later, he felt the same way.

The Yankees called a news conference and Joe D officially called it quits.

Hilldale hosting golf benefit

The first annual Forgotten Children's Invitational Golf Tournament will be held on Saturday, Aug. 24, and offer local residents an opportunity to golf with Chicago personalities for the benefit of youngsters who are wards of Illinois.

Hilldale Golf Club in Hoffman Estates will host more than 100 couples from throughout the northwest suburbs. They'll have the opportunity to play against television newscasters Fahey Flynn, Joel Daly and Floyd Kalber, columnis Jack Mabley, numerous radio announcers, members of the Chicago Cougars hockey team and other Chicago notables.

Each couple's $25 donation will be directed to the Forgotten Children's Fund, started 14 years ago to provide assistance to the residents of Dixon and Lincoln State Schools plus nearly 20 other state institutions across Illinois.

"We hope to raise $1,500 to $2,000 for the Fund from this scotch-doubles event," noted tournament director Thomas H. Craft.

The golfing action will be followed by a buffet dinner at the Hilldale Manor (formerly the Dale House) at which time golf prizes and numerous other door prizes will be presented.

Paddock Publications will sponsor two first class round trip tickets to London via British Airways. Other prizes include dinners at area restaurants plus accomodation packages at various hotels.

For more information, contact Craft at 882-4532.

Fire acquires quarterback insurance

by MIKE KLEIN

Take a deep breath, run fast and you probably still won't keep pace with Bill Byrne, Chicago Fire personnel director.

Fresh from its finest hour, the Fire moved to strengthen its reserve quarterbacking Thursday afternoon by acquiring Ted McNulty, former Indiana University star most recently with the NFL New England Patriots.

He's the second quarterback to join coach Jim Spavital's team in the past 10 days. Byrne also sought out ex-Ohio Northern signal caller John Smith who's been in Chicago's Maryville Academy camp since being released by the Oakland Raiders.

Spavital, who hadn't yet met his newest acquisition, said McNulty's arrival forebodes no major changes in Fire thinking and does not spell D-O-O-M for Maurie Daigneau, current back-up signal caller to Virg Carter.

"Oh, no, it's just that we've got a spot open on our inactive roster for a quarterback," Spavital said not 24 hours after Carter engineered a great 32-29 Soldier Field win over the Philadelphia Bell. "Most teams carry three quarterbacks. We've had just two."

McNulty had a sparkling three-year varsity career cut short by torn right knee ligaments during Indian'as game with Ohio State two seasons ago. He played no football last year.

Despite the injury, McNulty's college statistics show 224-of-459 passing for 2,534 yards and 14 touchdowns. He was drafted in spring, 1973, by the Cincinnati Bengals but didn't report because the knee hadn't fully recuperated.

New England bought his contract last winter. McNulty went to camp with the Patriots this summer and lasted better than one month before he was released.

"I came home to Indianapolis and played one game with the Caps last weekend," McNulty said. "Then Bill (Byrne) called and asked me to come up here."

McNulty spent last year working in commercial real estate and rehabilitating the right knee. "It feels fine," he said. "I'm able to do everything I want."

Spavital said he anticipates no immediate trades or other acquisitions. But the Fire needs defensive secondary help and could use more insurance for running backs Cyril Pinder and Mark Kellar who had super nights against the Bell. Pinder gained 151 yards and Kellar 112.

Chicago is exceptionally thick at linebacker with seven and would likely sacrifice one or two. Certain untouchables are Ron Porter and Rudy Kuechenberg. J. Armstrong might be vulnerable. He was deactivated before Wednesday nitht's game.

The arrival of McNulty is just more good news during a happy week for the Fire. Chicago rallied during the final three minutes, marching 80 yards in nine plays, to defeat Philadelphia.

That kept them one notch behind unbeaten Birmingham in the WFL Central Division. The Americans are 6-0 and Chicago 5-1. They'll meet on Thurday, Aug. 29, in Soldier Field, then again two weeks later in Birmingham.

Until Wednesday, Chicago hadn't had a runner go past 100 yards in any game. Then Pinder and Kellar both did it. Pinder scored twice and Kellar once, increasing his scoring total to a WFL leading 71 points.

"We didn't fold. We stuck with the running game all night," said offensive tackle Steve Wright. He helped clean the route for Pinder's second touchdown and said Cyril "made all the difference."

"He made some fantastic runs (47 and 39-yard long gainers). Cyril's got the age and experience," Wright said. "That's what won for us."

Pinder's been hobbled with muscle pulls this season and came down with the flu last week when he gained just eight yards during Chicago's loss to Florida. He'd been a forgotten man with just 183 yards before Wednesday.

But Wright insisted Pinder has been a man behind-the-scenes and instrumental in Kellar's early season success. "Mark's a kid just building up his confidence. He's got Cyril who can show him what to do," said Wright.

"He can ask, 'What do I do in this situation?' Cyril's been around long enough to explain it and help him."

THE FIRE LOG — Joe Womack's three pass interceptions gives him six all season and ought to lead the WFL when new statistics are released this weekend. Womack has a slight ligament strain in his left knee. "We might put on a cast for a couple days to keep it straight," he said. "But it's nothing serious."

Arden takes golf title

Jim Arden of Palatine captured the Class A title in Tuesday's Palatine Hills Junior Golf Tourney, sponsored by the Men's Golf Association. Arden, in the 17-18-year-old class, shot a 38-35-73 to edge out Bob Capoun by a single stroke. Capoun took second with a 36-38-74 and Brian Brown was third with a 43-36-79.

The Class B title went to Mike Severs with a 40-38-78. Second place in the 14-16-year-old class went to Bill Garcia at 40-39-79 and third was taken by John Saxer with a 37-45-82.

John Cloran won the 12-13-year-old Class C title with a 45-46-91, followed by Mike Arden at 47-45-92 and Scott Mattike at 51-45-96.

The longest drive competition in each age group was won by Jim Higley in Class A, Dave Lyons in Class B, and Kevin Williams in Class C.

The tourney was directed by Jim Takahashi, Ernie Purcelli, and Frank Robinson.

Palatine hockey plans set

The Palatine Amateur Hockey Association's plans for the Youth Hockey program for 1974-75 season are complete. The house league program will be a combination of indoor and outdoor games and practices.

The Mites, (7 and 8 years old) are scheduled for 34 indoor sessions at the Arlington Ice Spectrum. The first half of the season the Mites will play and practice on "half-ice" to give the boys more ice time while they are schooled in the fundamentals of the game. The second half of the season the boys will play in full-ice games.

The Squirts (9 and 10 years old), Pee Wees (11 and 12), Bantams (13 and 14) and Midgets (15 and 16) will have 24 indoor sessions at the Arlington Ice Spectrum. These sessions will be a combination of practices and games.

At the end of the indoor season, there will be a tournament in each house league division. All teams will participate in a single-elimination tournament to determine a tournament winner.

The travellig teams will consist of six teams — Mite through Juniors. This year they will skate in a 36-game schedule in the N.I.H.L., with their home games at the Spectrum. They will also have an expanded schedule of 30 practice hours.

Registration for Palatine Park District residents will begin Aug. 31 and continue through Sept. 6 during regular park district hours, 9 A.M. to 4:30 P.M. weekdays, and half-days on Saturday. Non-residents may begin registering on Sept. 7.

Fee schedules, tryout times, games times and other information about the ice hockey program are available at the park district office.

All-Stars fall in Regional

After winning the District and Sectional championships, Buffalo Grove's Pony League All-Stars were eliminated from the National Pony League Tournament in Regional action at Waukegan last weekend.

Buffalo Grove picked up its first Regional victory by blasting host Waukegan 11-4, as Andy Farrissey picked up the win, yielding but two hits in five innings of work. Fred Kruse mopped up. Phil Czosnyka crashed a home run to pace the visitors' attack.

Mike Marshall hurled a one-hitter as Buffalo Grove downed Rockford 5-0 in second round play. Marshall fanned 17 while walking only one. Mike Fenney picked up two hits for the victors.

In the semi-finals, Oak Park-River Forest edged the Grovers 5-4. Buffalo Grove had the tying and winning runs on second and third with one out in their final at-bat, but the clutch hitting just wasn't there.

Chuck Havelka and Marshall cracked round-trippers, but it didn't keep Czosnyka from sustaining the loss.

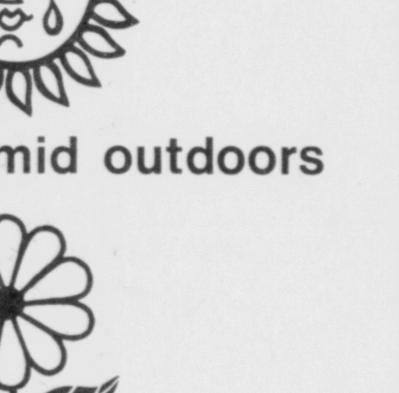

Buffalo Grove's pitching prowess deserted them in their final encounter of the double elimination event as Rockford came back to plummet them, 16-7. The only bright spots for Grove fans were Ken Poczekaj's defense and hitting plus Russ Wieser's batwork.

Forget about your awful ego and play Zensational tennis

by IRA BERKOW

NEW YORK — There are certain persons who can drive from their minds the pullulations that stiffen their less-blessed brethren.

Give an example: Once, lore proclaims, Yogi Berra was sent to pinch-hit in his salad days. He was a notorious bad-ball hitter. His manager thought young Yogi could improve. The manager cautioned, "Yogi, THINK when you're at bat."

Yogi struck out with his bat on his shoulder. His manager asked upon his return to the dugout, "What happened?" Yogi replied with undisguised disgust, "I can't think and hit at the same time."

The manager later demonstrated the good sense that is rampantly uncommon among managers and other hell-bent pedagogues. He left Yogi alone to do it his way. This August, some 25 years after, Yogi is being enshrined in Baseball's Hall of Fame.

Yogi is rare. Not all of us can clear our minds the way Hercules cleansed the Augean Stables. Berra had a zen approach to baseball that came naturally.

He was prophetically nicknamed "Yogi" not because he was inclined toward Eastern mysticism. Lawrence Peter Berra was named "Yogi" by his friends because he walked with a waddle, the way, they imagined, yogas ambulate. Berra might have believed at the time, and might still believe, for that matter, that the three-letter word for yoga philosophy was simply a Teutonic mispronunciation of the word "then."

I thought about Yogi when I recently attended a small tennis clinic given by W. Timothy Gallwey, a tennis instructor and the author of recently published book, "The Inner Game of Tennis" (Random House), which is described as a "yoga tennis book."

The essence of the philosophy as applied to tennis is to "let" things happen: Don't force. Flow! "Feel your body, don't intellectualize it."

The roots of the theory in relation to sport comes from another book, "Zen in the Art of Archery," which Gallwey credits. It was written by the Zen master, D. T. Suzuki, who stated: "As soon as we reflect, deliberate and conceptualize, the original unconsciousness is lost and a thought interferes . . . The arrow is off the string but does not fly straight to the target, nor does the target stand where it is. Calculation, which is miscalculation sets in . . ." and "Man is a thinking reed but his great works are done when he is not calculating and thinking. 'Childlikeness' has to be restored with long years of training in self-forgetfulness."

Gallwey explained that much of the problem of the would-be athlete, or functioning individual in any field, is that he puts too much pressure on himself by thinking too much. How will my peers view me if I lose? Am I worthless if I lose? This is the kind of teeming rot that overpopulates our brain. Egolessness, says Gallwey, is the so-called name of the game. Unshackle your brain. For example, Gellwey relaxes and also concentrates while on the court by listening to the ping of the ball striking the racket. It takes the mind off pressure and on to the beauty of the activity, he says.

I asked Gallwey if he could help my serve. It is quite erratic. In fact, it doesn't land in the square very much at all. I hit one. The ball hit the net as surely as if it were sucked in by a vortex. Gallwey knit his brows. He said I was trying to hit too hard and thinking too much about where the ball was going. I stopped thinking. He said feel your body flow. I did the stationary float. Then I hit 10 straight balls, all unthinking, all flowing, and all all over the court.

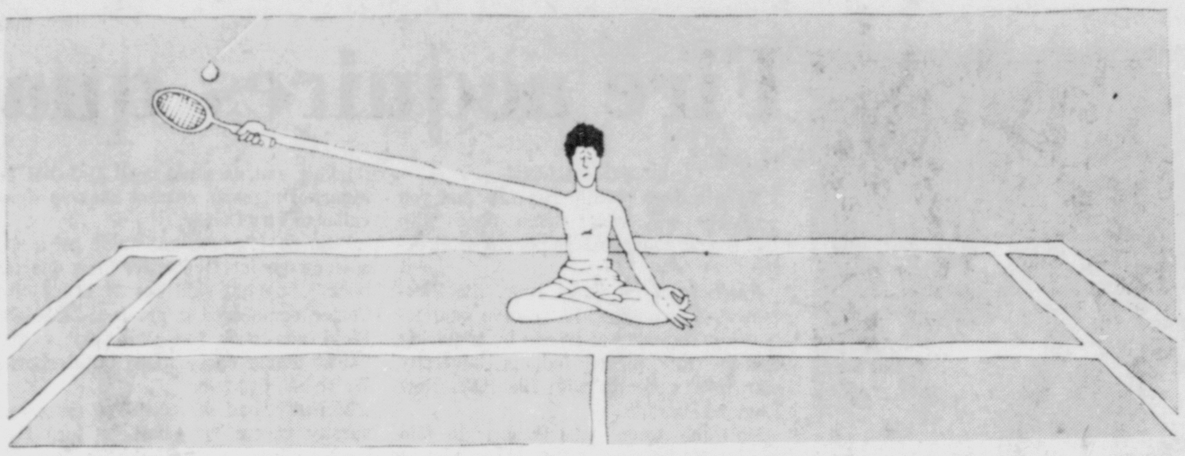

For me, P. G. Wodehouse, the British writer, and not Gallwey or D. T. Suzuki, has uncovered the quintessential truth on zen and sport. Wodehouse has written in this vein aboug golf:

"Golf is in its essence a simple game. . . Where the average man goes wrong is in making the game difficult for himself. Observe the nonplayer, the man who walks around with you for the sake of fresh air. He will hole out with a single carefree flick of his umbrella the 20-foot putt over which you would ponder and hesitate for a full minute before sending it right off line.

"Put a driver in his hands and he pastes the ball into the next county without a thought. It is only when he takes to the game in earnest that he becomes self-conscious and anxious, and tops his shots even as you and I.

"A man who could retain through his golfing career the almost scornful confidence of the nonplayer would be unbeatable. Fortunately such an attitude of mind is beyond the scope of human nature."

A singular exception being, certainly, the unpolluted Yogi.

Zen: the unthinking man's guide to increased forgetfulness and better tennis.

Buffalo Grove All-Stars baseball scores, summary

The Buffalo Grove Minor League All-Stars finished in second place in the Round Lake Invitational Tournament, losing the title game to Skokie, 10-6. Buffalo Grove beat Lake Zurich, 12-2, in semi-finals.

Buffalo Grove was led by the fine pitching of Joe Pash, Mike Kozemzak, Bill Anderson, Dave Freeland and Kevin Luthringshausen.

Scot Duval and Kozemzak were the leading hitters with 11 hits apiece and Duval had nine-runs-batted in. Tom Fay added 10 hits for Buffalo Grove. Fay, Luthringshausen and Kozemzak hit home runs.

Catchers Mark Tylinski and Mike Zafer made some fine defensive plays. Also contributing to the second place finish were Brett Hardt, Bob Bell, Scott Rech, Joe Jolloy, Tom Mullins, Mike Lindholm and Chris Gorman.

Golf honor to Eckstein

Charles Eckstein, long time tournament official and past pesident of the Chicago District Golf Association, has won the Chick Evans Award for 1974.

The Evans Award is presented to the person who has contributed most to the popularity and status of amateur golf in the Chicago area, and for deeds beyond the greens and fairways.

Among the five others nominated for the award was Mike Spinello of Buffalo Grove.

The Mercedes-Benz 450SE. Will the others ever catch up?

©Mercedes-Benz 1974

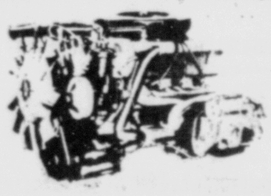

Mercedes-Benz has always engineered automobiles which are ahead of their time. Many of the concepts that put these automobiles ahead were pioneered by Mercedes-Benz over 20 years ago. They are still not found in any American sedan.

The 450SE has moved Mercedes-Benz even farther ahead. It has developed the basic systems of the automobile to greater heights than any other sedan in Mercedes-Benz history. Will the other manufacturers ever catch up? Read the following. Then decide for yourself.

Shape and size of the future

The 450SE looks as if it were designed in a wind tunnel, not a styling center. It was. Its aerodynamic design harnesses airflow instead of fighting it.

On the outside, the 450SE Sedan is not as big as a full-sized American car. The only thing big about this Mercedes-Benz is the amount of room inside. The 450SE is a five-passenger sedan with fully 20 cubic feet of trunk space. And its 25.4-gallon gas tank can give you about 400 miles of cruising range.

The engine of tomorrow

The engine in the 450SE is a sensible 276-cubic inch V-8. An overhead camshaft design featuring computerized, electronic fuel injection, this clean burning engine delivers good mileage without paying a performance penalty. An engine others will strive for tomorrow—available in the 450SE today.

The best handling Mercedes-Benz Sedan ever

It's almost unfair to compare a 450SE's handling with a domestic sedan's. Each wheel on a 450SE is suspended separately. So, unlike all domestic sedans which continue to have the same basic wagon-type rear axle they have had for decades, the suspension of a 450SE is fully independent.

Mercedes-Benz goes to great expense and effort to initiate new suspension developments. They can spell the difference between accident and incident. Ahead of their time? Unfortunately, for other sedan owners, years ahead. Owners of the 450SE, however, can call on these developments right now, and every time they take the wheel.

Safety first

The structure of the 450SE is the latest in a series of Mercedes-Benz developments of the patented rigid passenger cell/deformable extremity construction. It is designed so that the front and rear extremities absorb force in the event of an impact, to help the passenger cell remain intact.

One final thought. Today, when more than ever everyone is searching for lasting value, a Mercedes-Benz 450SE makes good sense. After all, an automobile which is years ahead of the rest today is far more likely to hold its value while the others are trying to catch up tomorrow.

Major league managers: working in a revolving door

by IRA BERKOW

NEW YORK — (NEA) — The single most prestigious thing to happen to the black man in baseball may be that he has never been chosen a big-league manager.

The record plainly states that the people least qualified to discern leadership qualities and managerial acumen are the men who hire the hardball skippers.

And if these owners of the teams (or their general managers, an appendage of the owners) do not see fit to place a black at the helm, then what a gaudy plume of triumph the black man may insert in his beaked, peaked cap. In the last 20 years, there have been approximately 175 managers in the major leagues. And if there had been 24 games — as there are today — from 1954 to 1962 instead of 16, then there surely would have been over 200 managers. A few managers died on the job or quit or were retired for health reasons; all others were dismissed for incompetency.

This averages out to roughly one manager for three years for every team. In any other industry, this kind of mass turnover would necessitate the universal use of revolving doors. In baseball, they use turnstiles.

In any other kind of industry, such enormous and wholesale changes at such a top level of management would be destructive. Internal morale and public confidence would be in chaotic shambles. Yet no matter how often the owners bumble, the game, incredibly, survives. Apparently, the product is so good that it may be enfeebled but not altogether wiped out.

In the last 20 years, only one team has kept on with one manager. That is the Los Angeles Dodgers, with Walter Alston. The Dodgers have won pennants, come close to others, fallen into the second division, returned to the top of the standings. Alston has remained. It may be more than coincidence that Dodger owner Walter O'Malley has by far the most successful operation in baseball. He draws more fans, makes more money, pleases more customers (with the cleanest and best-appointed park), and his team wins as many or more games than any competitor.

The names of no other owners will be mentioned here, for it is not this writer's intention to malign, impugn, castigate or otherwise bumrap these birdbrains. But isn't the size of their alleged minds painfully apparent when they keep firing the people they hire? And with such relative swiftness? They just are incapable of making a skilled appointment to begin with.

The pattern according to the record goes something like this: They hire a man who has shown that on a good day he can tie his baseball shoe without spiking himself. First year is the "get-acquainted" year. Second year, he must prove himself. Third year, he is given one more try — until midseason.

Then he is bounced.

Know what next happens to this leader of men, this uncanny general of the baseball battlefields, this raving double-knit genius? He is hired by another owner. And history inexorably repeats itself. Sometimes it's shorter, sometimes it's a little longer. But the same fate awaits them all.

In the American League, the Red Sox have had 11 managers in 20 years, the Indians 12, the Orioles 6, the White Sox 8, the Angels 5 in their 13 years, the Tigers 14, Kansas City 14, Oakland 5 in 6 years, Washington-Texas 9. Minnesota 6 in 13 years, the Yankees 6, Milwaukee Brewers 2 in 4 years.

In the National League from 1954: Atlanta-Milwaukee Braves 10 managers, Cubs 7-plus, Reds 8, Astros 6 in 12 years, Expos 1 in 5 years, Mets 5 in 12 years, Phillies 10, Pirates 9, Cardinals 7, Padres 3 in 5 years and the Giants 8.

Some people were miffed that Clyde King instead of a black like Henry Aaron or Maury Wills or Frank Robinson was recently selected to manage the Braves, and that Jim Marshall was the recent pick to pilot the Cubs. But both choices follow team patterns.

King was fired from the Giants in his last managerial job, which qualifies him for his Atlanta job, just as such predecessors as Charlie Grimm, Charlie Dressen, Bobby Bragan, Billy Hitchcock and Lum Harris were fired by previous teams before becoming Braves' managers.

And Jim Marshall, he too follows in his team's tradition of managers. From 1961 to 1965 the owner of the Cubs, grasping, attempted a novel concept. He revolved back and forth from the minors about 10 men who took turns managing the Cubs. A baseball guide book inadvertently but astutely summed up the situation; it reads: Cub managers, 1961-65, "None."

Minting a fresh Olympic attitude

by IRA BERKOW

In all immodesty Anaxilas of Rhegium, referred to in history books as "the Sicilian tyrant," had a silver coin minted in 480 B.C. to honor his Olympic victory in a chariot race.

Some 2,500 years after nasty Anaxilas was credited with striking the first coin to commemorate a sporting event, such activity has become an important aspect of the Olympic Games to be held in Montreal in 1976, and perhaps integral to saving the concept of the Olympics overall.

Canada has launched a program to make the '76 Games financially self-sufficient through the world-wide sale of commemorative coins.

It is estimated that over 80 per cent of the amount necessary to pay Canada's projected Olympic bill of $310 million will come from coin sales. The rest of the seven million dollars and change will come from the sale of special stamps, a national lottery and merchandising tie-ins.

The idea is that if the organizing Olympic committees in the various nations can raise the money themselves to send their athletic troops off to do sporting combat, then governments (who have invariably picked up the tab) will have less to say about their teams, and thus the tainted aspect of nationalism will diminish.

And so, it is hoped, will incidents like that in which the African nations threatened to boycott the Munich '72 Olympics unless the Rhodesian team (because of its government's apartheid philosphy) was evicted. Rhodesia's team, which included some 10 blacks, was forced to leave the Olympic Village.

It is hoped that with independent financing there will never be a recurrence of the 1936 Berlin Olympics, for example, which was used by Hitler as a showcase for his militarism and racism.

And it is hoped that the spirit of brotherhood and not nationhood will shine through finally in the Olympics. It has been the dream of some Olympic organizers, but rarely has such stuff surfaced.

"From these Olympics forward maybe we will be able to recognize a man for a man, and not necessarily a man for an African, or an American, or anything else," said Roger Rosseau, president and commissioner general of the Organizing Committee of the 1976 Summer Olympic Games.

"I think we can get on the road to this when the people of the world are helping to finance the athletes instead of the governments."

Rosseau added that with the sale of commemorative coins — minted in $5 and $10 denominations, any nation, regardless of size, would be able to finance an Olympics. Previously only major cities of the world have been able to support a summer Olympics.

Financing is not the sole reason for the attitudes of extreme nationalism. There remains the impetus for nationalism by such things as the playing of the national anthem as the winning athlete stands on the victory platform. There is also the opening and closing ceremonies in which athletes walk into the stadium by country, behind their nation's flag, the wearing of national uniforms, and the preoccupation of the world press with keeping the standings of national performance.

"It's unfortunate that such point standings must be kept," said Rousseau, "because it creates unnecessary attention beyond the athletic field.

"But I see nothing wrong with maintaining the traditions of nations. I think flags and anthems are good. Any good performer needs an audience, and this is his moment of glory. As for uniforms, well, something like all white, or colors for the specific sports would be too general. I mean, athletes need some pride of individuality."

Rosseau was asked if he had discussed these thoughts with any Olympic athletes. Rosseau, a white-haired, 53-year-old one-time Canadian ambassador to a few African countries, said no. But isn't the coin concept part of the large scope of making the Olympics more for athletes and less for nations? And hasn't a major contention of the athletes been that there is a gap between themselves and the distant, older organizers?

"Athletes," said Rosseau, "are not very mature. It's not easy to talk philosophically with them. A pole vaulter would rather talk about his pole — that sort of thing."

One wonders how the Olympic charioteer Anaxilas, rugged ruler of Rhegium and minter of coins, would have responded to such patronage.

I contributed to this innocence, this naivete. Tremendously. I believed in it and was impressed by athletes and by what I was seeing."

One day in the 1930s, Gallico felt that what he was doing was dumb, and quit to write short stories.

A young man in St. Louis named Red Smith was beginning his career as a sportswriter.

"I won't deny that the heavy majority of sportswriters, myself included, have been and still are guilty of puffing up the people they write about. I remember one time when Stanley Woodward, my beloved leader, was on the point of sending me a wire during spring training, saying, "Will you stop Godding up those ball players?' . . . If we've made heroes out of them, and we have, then we must also lay a whole set of false values at the doorsteps of historians and biographers. Not only has the athlete been blown up larger than life, but so have the politicians in all fields, including rock singers and movie stars.

"When you go through Westminster Abbey you'll find that excepting for that little Poets' Corner almost all of the statues and memorials are to killers. To generals and admirals who won battles, whose speciality was human slaughter. I don't think they're such glorious heroes."

Jimmy Cannon once covered Washington. "When I was young," he said, "they sent me there to cover the White House. I did it for awhile, but the town bored me and I left. I can't stand politicians. They lie more than football coaches. I had to be transferred out of there."

Tunis said that many of the sportswriters don't admit that some of the games and athletes are dull because "they're fearful of losing their jobs." But then reconsiders somewhat, "But I suppose the spectators, the fans, don't want to be told, either. They may not like it if you tell them sports is unimportant. I understand some sportswriters are trying to do this, that this is the new trend. Good. But it's taken a hell of a long time."

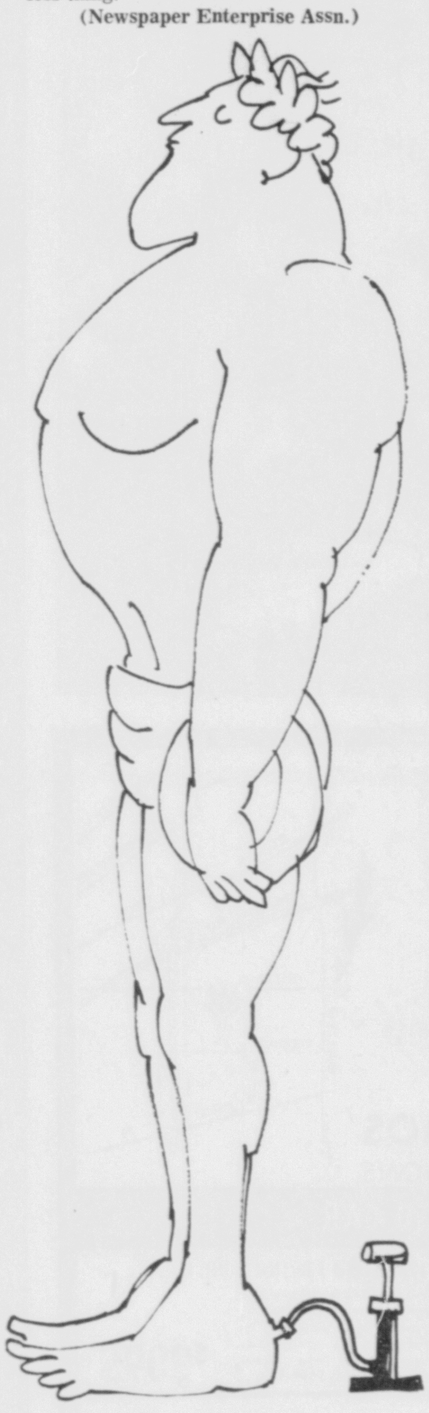

Few sportswriters today use such overblown phrases, as Abe Kemp in San Francisco did 50 years ago. He once wrote about a batter who "rammy-cackled the old tomato."

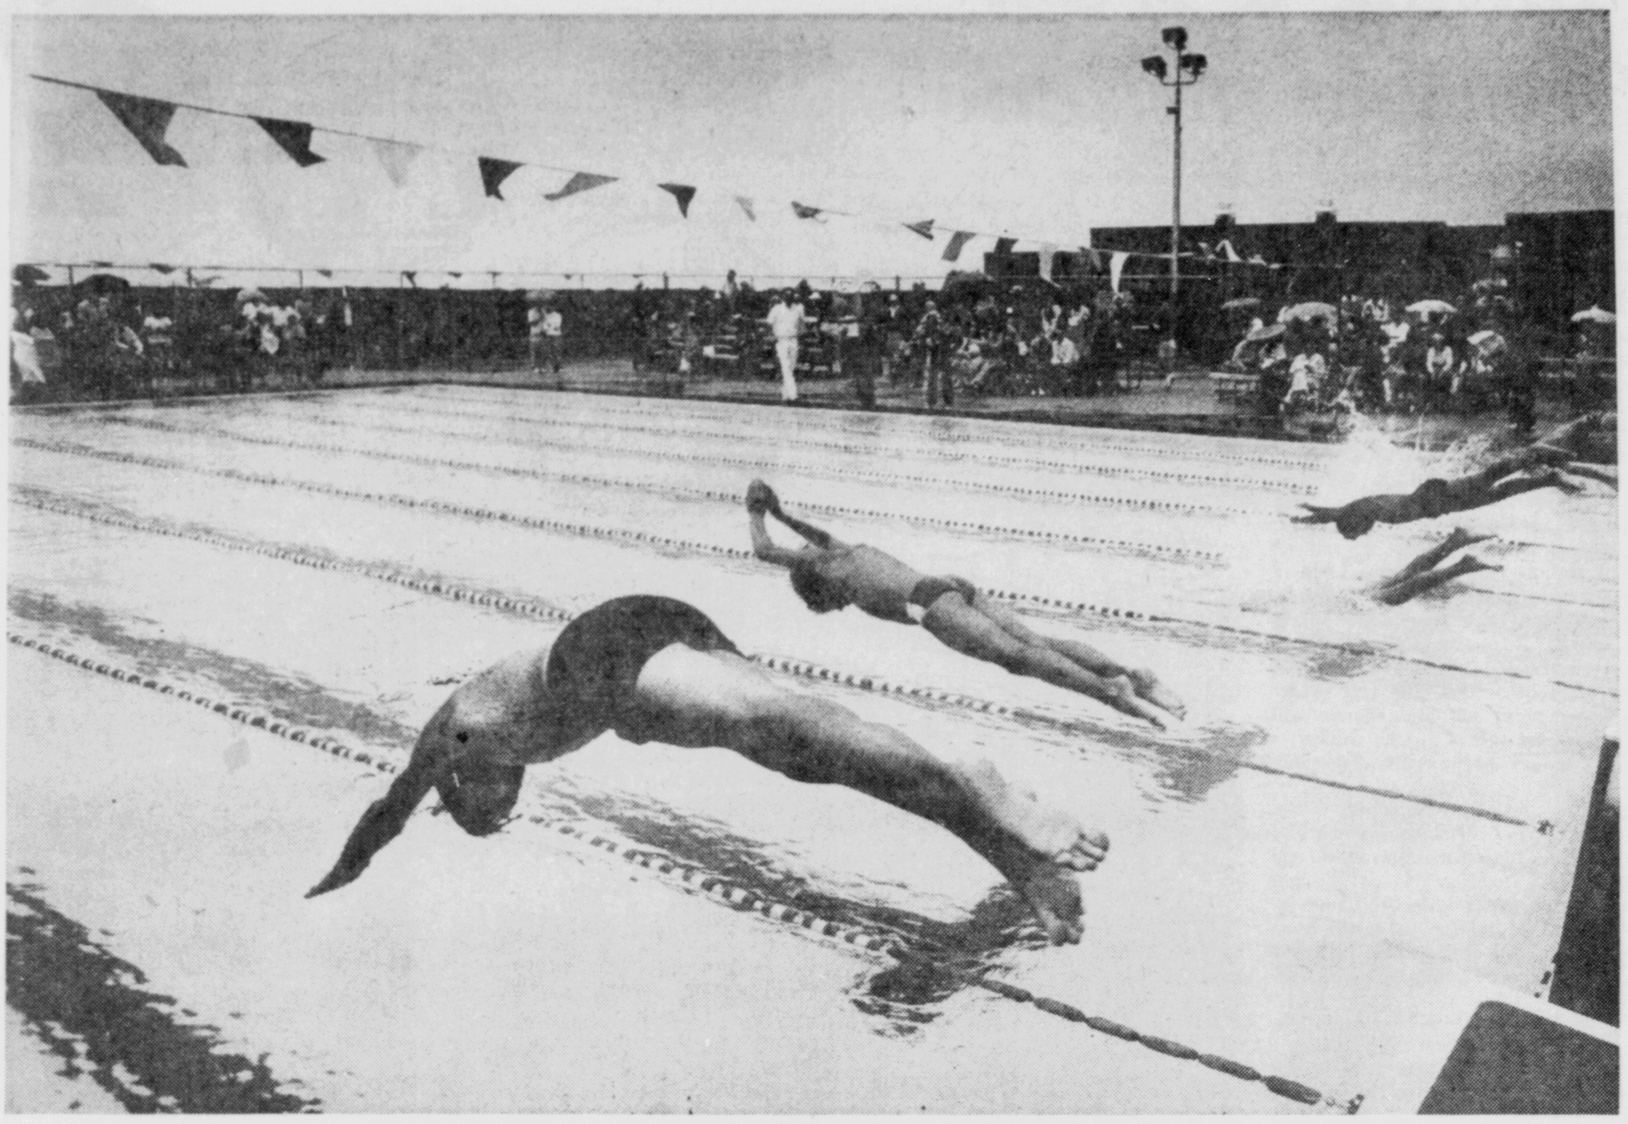

And rarely are the exploits of a team or a player so blantly deified as in Grantland Rice's Biblically inspired lead about the Notre Dame backfield in 1924: "Outlined against a blue-gray October sky, the Four Horsemen rode again. In dramatic lore they are known as Famine, Pestilence, Destruction and Death. They are only aliases. Their real names are Stuhldreher, Miller, Crowley and Layden."

There is still a great deal of puffery, of "Godding up" the athletes. It is a shame because there is a beautiful place for sports in society, taken in balance.

"I think," said Red Smith, "that sports constitute a valid part of our culture, our civilization, and keeping the public informed and, if possible, a little entertained about sports is not an entirely useless thing."

LOOK. NO ASTERISKS.

Asterisks are a sure sign that the model you want is going to cost more than you thought.

Volvo has come up with an ingenious device to replace asterisks: standards. They allow every Volvo 164 to come fully equipped, at no extra cost, with extras like:

Air conditioning
Automatic transmission
Power steering
Infinitely-adjustable front bucket seats that let you sit on leather
Fuel injection
Four-wheel power disc brakes
Whitewall radial tires
Ten-outlet heating and ventilation system
Rear window defroster/defogger
Tinted glass all around
Four 3-point retractable seat belts
Child-proof rear door locks
12-month warranty with unlimited mileage

Of course, with all these standards, you may wonder if the Volvo 164 comes with any factory-installed options. Yes. Volvo left one opening for options. A sunroof.

Schellenberger 6th in AAU

Steve Schellenberger, soon to be a junior at Forest View High School, placed sixth in the 880-yard run last weekend in the AAU Junior Olympics in Lincoln, Neb.

Schellenberger, who specialized in the 440 last year under head Falcon coach Bill Mohrmann, ran a 1:56.5 for the best qualifying time on Saturday. On Sunday, however, he posted a 1:56.7 for a sixth overall.

The Forest View runner had qualified for the meet by turning in a superb 1:53.2 at Gary, Ind. five weeks ago, his best time ever.

"It was the best competition I've ever faced," said the slim 16-year-old. "I was mentally ready, but I was stale. I peaked too soon.

"But I'm surprised that I got this far," he continued. "Now that I'm back, I can say that. It was quite an experience. It was really great."

Mohrmann, who did not accompany his high school runner, was encouraged by the news of Steve's sixth-place finish.

"The problem is to keep him peaked," said Mohrmann. "At least we know it's there."

For Schellenberger, he can look back to his first airplane trip and the excitement of an AAU meet. And he can look ahead to many more.

Olympic lodging information

People planning to attend the 21st Olympiad International Summer Olympic games in Montreal from July 17-Aug. 1, 1976 in Montreal, Canada will confront their first big problem in trying to secure comfortable lodging for their stay. The public information service of Joseph B. Brown & Co. has come out with a booklet listing the accommodations available in Montreal. It can be received free of charge by writing to the company at 640 Cathcart St., Suite 101, Montreal 111, Quebec, Canada. The telephone number is 255-7101.

New Jersey champs visit

On Aug. 17, 1974, the Blue-White Soccer Club will play a match on the pitch of the Maine East Stadium at 8 p.m. against Pennsauken High School, New Jersey state champs for 1973. The game is a last minute replacement for the previously scheduled Aug. 10 game against the Guadalajara Select.

Tournament at Dug Out

Dug Out Park is searching for teams to fill the field in their women's 12-inch slow pitch softball tournament to be held Aug. 24-25. The tournament will be open invitational and single elimination.

The entry fee of $35 includes trophies for the top four teams and individual trophies for the champions. There is a 16 team limit with only half the field filled so far.

For information call Tom Furlan at 414-862-9136 or mail entry fee to Dug Out Park, Rt. 1, Box 321, Trevor, Wis. 53179.

The park is located on Highway 83 two miles north of Antioch.

Hooton and LaRoche at Mall

Burt Hooton and Dave LaRoche, Chicago Cub pitchers, will be appearing at the Buffalo Grove Mall, tonight at 7:30. Hooton and LaRoche will sign autographed pictures and meet their friends and customers at the shopping center.

Two in contention

Richard Fick of 1110 E. Algonquin Rd., Schaumburg and Harvey Sheppard of 1010 Jeanette, Des Plaines are both eligible to win a free trip to Scotland and $1,000 as a result of recent holes in one. Fick aced his shot at the Bonnie Dundee Golf Club and Sheppard at the Park Ridge Country Club. The annual Rusty Nail Hole-In-One Sweepstakes is being sponsored by the Drambuie Company of Edinburgh, Scotland.

Locals in Metro tourney

Two local men's softball teams are entered in the 1974 Chicago Metro tournament of the Amateur Softball Association. Play begins today in Wheaton.

Neither local team plays until Saturday. The Mount Prospect Scrappers play at 10 a.m. against Fat Man's Inn. Kimberly Real Estate meets the Bensenville Chiefs at noon.

Closest to pin

Ken Krajchovich of Buffalo Grove came closest to the pin as Channel 2 filmed golfers at the 17th hole of Buffalo Grove Golf course on Sunday, Aug. 4. Krajchovich's tee shot on the 135-yard par 3 hole came 5'9½" from the pin. He will receive a $25 gift certificate to the Buffalo Grove pro shop.

Area drivers win SCCA

The Chicago Region of the Sports Car Club of America held its Regional Championship Road Races at Blackhawk Farms Raceway over the past weekend. Two area men won championships among the 20 classes.

Paul Costello, of Barrington, drove his Austin Healey Sprite to victory in the H production category. Palatine's Don Smith guided his Alfa Romeo to first place in the G production category.

Saints open pre-season

The Niles Saints, defending champions of the Chicagoland Semi-Pro Football League, will open their home exhibition season at Notre Dame High School Stadium tomorrow against the CFL Lions.

Kickoff will be 8 p.m. on the field located at 7655 Dempster in Niles.

The Lions are coached by former all-pro guard Palmer Pyle.

The regular season begins Sept. 7.

From campuses nationwide

A pair of Des Plaines football players are among the 121 candidates for the 1974 Purdue University football team under the direction of second year head coach Alex Agase.

Rick O'Leary, a 6'6", 255-pound sophomore from Elk Grove High School will be fighting for a position on the offensive line.

Former all-stater Rich Wetendorf, from Maine West, is listed as one of the top three candidates at center.

—Carroll College of Waukesha, Wis. has announced the signing of two Wheeling High School basketball players. Head coach Ed Fleener said Bob Westrich and Bill Kenney will both attend Carroll this fall.

—Several area football players are listed among the expected candidates as Northern Illinois University opens football practice for the 1974 season.

Among them are Bill Welton from Arlington, Ed Dolan of Maine West, Dan Mincey and Bob Streich of Elk Grove, Mike Petran and Roddy Read from Forest View and Ed Klingberg from St. Viator.

—Greg Klebe, a middle distance trackman from Maine West High School has announced his plans to enroll at North Central College in Naperville this fall.

Aces in final home match

Only one home match remains to be played at the Lakeshore Racquet Club before the Chicago Aces conclude their initial World Team Tennis schedule.

It will be Sunday against the Baltimore Banners. Baltimore, despite the presence of Wimbledon champion Jimmy Connors for most of the season, seems to be mathematically eliminated from title contention and is unlikely to make the playoffs beginning Aug. 19.

Zambole shoots 77

Nick Zambole, from Palatine, shot a 77 in the qualifying round of the Press Thornton Masters Tournament in Dothan, Alabama and missed the cut for the field by a single stroke Monday.

Prospect grid registration

Football candidates attending Prospect High School are reminded to register between 8 a.m. and 4 p.m. Friday. Equipment will be issued to the varsity from 3-5 p.m., to sophomores from 4:30-6:30 and to freshmen at 9 a.m. on Monday, Aug. 19.

Before equipment is dispersed, players must have registered for school, completed a physical examination and returned a signed parent consent slip. An insurance policy, either through the school or a waiver from their parents must be obtained.

Emergency Sump Pumps serve alone or back-up

Any homeowner who has faced the agony of a flooding basement knows that a sump pump, which pumps the water from the basement to an outer area, is one of the most valuable pieces of equipment a home can have.

Even homes with sump pumps have faced a flooding basement in times of electrical storm when service is suspended, when the pump motor burns out, when the pump is clogged with debris or when there is simply too much water for the pump to handle.

Now there is a fool proof sump pump system called E.S.P. (Emergency Sump Pumps), a division of Window Well Cover Co., 716 E. Kensington, Arlington Heights.

The E.S.P. system is designed as a back-up system, but has the full operating capacity of a standard sump pump with a full one-third horse power motor. The E.S.P. system can pump 2,800 gallons per hour, more water than a home ever faces in the northwest suburbs.

According to Jeff Cady, co-owner of E.S.P., with Len Stanley, the system uses a battery twice the size of the average car battery; yet the system is low-voltage to protect homeowners against shock. The system automatically shuts off to protect the battery.

Cost of the E.S.P. varies from $187.88 to $350 and comes with a two-year guarantee against any defect in manufacturing. In addition, E.S.P. offers an extended life policy which insures maintenance and replacement of parts at any time for a standard $22.50 cost per year.

The E.S.P. system can be used alone, as it has standard power and pumping capacity, or as an emergency back-up system, which is essential because standard motors burn out on the average of once every two years.

A working display of the system is set up at E.S.P. in the same location of Window Well Cover Co. in Arlington Heights.

Students strive to conquer the barriers of illiteracy

by NANCY NORTH

"B i--rd," pronounced the woman slowly. Huge wet tears began to stream down her cheeks.

People often cry at achieving a milestone. For this Mexican woman, reading "bird" aloud was the beginning of the end to 36 years of illiteracy.

Nearly half a million adults in the greater Chicago area are functionally illiterate. Persons are considered functionally illiterate who cannot read at the fourth grade level. The group includes brain-damaged persons and remedial readers, as well as non-English-speaking persons.

The problems of illiteracy are enormous. Simple things such as buying groceries, getting a doctor or applying for a job are formidable tasks for those who cannot read, write or speak English.

For several years now, scores of local residents have committed their time, to counteracting the problems of illiteracy. Through literacy centers in Des Plaines, Elk Grove, Hanover Park and Palatine, hundreds have learned to read, write and speak English from volunteer tutors.

THE LOCAL centers are affiliates of the 92 Chicago Area Literacy and Reading centers as well as the National Affiliation of Literacy Advance. All employ the Laubach Literacy teaching technique, a one-to-one approach developed more than 40 years ago.

But the centers provide the students with much more than just the basic skills of English.

"In addition to the three R's, we teach them how to live in a world with strange food, strange signs, strange everything," says Mrs. Kathaleen Shula of Streamwood, who tutors and does public relations for the Hanover Park Literacy Center.

The vast majority of the students are non-English-speaking people from a variety of countries and educational backgrounds, says Mrs. Shula. Nearly half, she estimates, are illiterate in their own language.

"Many times we have to teach them how to hold a pencil," says Mrs. Shula.

DESPITE OVERWHELMING obstacles, Sigird Beckwith of Palatine, director of the Palatine center says, "Most of the students are highly motivated. They want to get a driver's license or their citizewnship in two days."

One Mexican student whom Mrs. Shula tutors was so motivated he wanted to read Shakespeare when he was still only reading fifth grade English. Mrs. Shula loaned him her volume of Shakespeare and several days later he returned it saying, "I quit. I wait till I finish learning English."

Each student wants to learn to read, write and speak English for a different reason, says Mrs. Shula. Some want to learn to speak English so they can teach their children English before they enter school. Others want to learn English so their children don't surpass them.

One student at the Hanover Park center was formerly a dentist in Egypt. He wants to learn enough English to pass the examinations which will allow him to become a certified dentist in the United States.

EACH STUDENT is assigned to a tutor, and tutoring sessions are arranged. Many attend evening classes at churches or other community agencies. Others receive instruction in their tutor's home, their own home or at a common meeting place during the day.

Students who attend evening classes "are really close friends and help each other out," says Mrs. Shula. "They try their English out on each other after class."

One evening, the class was learning to distinguish between "twin" and "twine" and an Italian student did not understand what twine was, says Mrs. Shula. The next week, three students from Thailand each brought a piece of twine to class to show the Italian student.

"The persona linvolvement with the students is beyond belief," says Mrs. Shula. "Many times they confide special problems and we end up helping them buy a house or sign a lease, making sure they don't get taken for a ride."

Anyone who can read and write English well can become a certified Laubach tutor. Volunteer tutors are trained in a free 15-hour workshop. Afterwards they are assigned a student to tutor 1½ hours each week. The only cost to tutor and student is about $7 for five workbooks.

OF THE FOUR centers operating locally for several years, only two are actively operative. A center at Alexian Brothers Medical Center for hospital personnel discontinued the Laubach method in May because of a shortage of tutors, says Mrs. Rose Krier, director of the hospital's education department.

Hospital personnel now are learning English in classes taught by a Harper College professor.

Even at the thriving Hanover Park center there is a continual shortage of tutors. Mrs. Shula, who tutors six students herself, says the number of students is constantly growing and maintaining an equal number of tutors is difficult.

A center at the First Congregational Church in Des Plaines folded in March because of a shortage of students. Mrs. Daniel Jacobson of Des Plaines says most of their students were women who had to discontinue their lessons and work full time to supplement family income.

The Des Plaines center operated for eight years. A few remaining students are still being tutored by their former teachers, says Mrs. Jacobson, but no classes are being held.

The Palatine and Hanover Park centers are thriving. The Palatine center has 22 tutors and 28 students from South America, Central America, Germany, Japan and Vietnam.

The Hanover Park center which serves Hanover Park, Hoffman Estates, Schaumburg, and Des Plaines, Streamwood and Elgin has 66 tutors and 175 students from 15 countries.

THE REWARDS of being a tutor are countless, according to those involved in the program:

"I think the basic reward is knowing you helped someone feel a part of this country," says Mrs. Beckwith. "It gives you a heightened appreciation for a whole lot of things you normally take for granted."

"Most importantly, it is a human relations experiment, bringing people of different backgrounds together," says Jan Hansen of Streamwood, a trainer of tutors and founder of the program in the Hanover Park area.

"It's a remarkable thing," says Mrs. Hansen. "The teacher-student relationship soon becomes friend-friend. The cultural exchange is invaluable."

Tutor training workshops to begin in fall

Tutor training workshops will be held this fall for any adults and high school or college students interested in tutoring English at the Laubach Literacy centers in Palatine or Hanover Park.

Tutors need only to be able to read and write English well. All Laubach tutors must attend a 15-hour training workshop, free of charge. Upon completion of the training workshop, each tutor is assigned a student to tutor 1½ hours each week.

Persons interested in attending the Palatine workshop Sept. 22, 23, 29 and 30 should contact Mrs. Sigrid Beckwith, 359-4099.

No date has been set for the Hanover Park center training workshop. Persons interested in tutoring for the Hanover Park center should contact Mrs. Kathleen Shula, 837-0293.

The cost to tutors and students is about $7 for workbooks. Tutoring sessions and locations are arranged between tutor and student.
